SUPPORTERS OF APPOINTEE ARE HOPEFUL

Administration Men Making Hard Fight to Gain Temporary Admission for Illinois Man, But His Opponents Confident of Rejection-- Expect Vote Thursday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Rallying in unexpected force, friends of Frank L. Smith made a desperate fight today to overturn the odds that have forecast his exclusion from the senate.

As the second day of debate dragged on, with a possibility of action before adjournment, partisans of the Illinois senator designate sought by means of personal suasion to wipe out the slender majority that had been claimed against him.

When yesterday's session adjourned the opposition leaders had to advantage by a handful of votes, and the opposition leaders still were claiming today that this advantage would be held until the showdown on the other side, however, predictions began to grow rosier.

The state's rights issue again was the dominating note in the whole discussion on the floor and in the earnest private consultations. The Smith people were seeking support for the resolution introduced by Senator Overman of North Carolina providing that the Illinois appointee be seated without prejudice to any future inquiry into the financing of his primary campaign last year. The argument addressed by Senator Overman to his democratic colleagues was that not a single southern democrat would have been admitted to the senate after the Civil War under the rule invoked in the case of Smith.

Democrats opposed. Republican regulars, who stand solidly for admission of the Illinois man and investigation of his fitness afterward, saw in the democratic opposition their chief hope of winning over the votes needed for a majority. Except for Overman and Blaine of South Carolina, the democrats have stood almost as a unit in support of the resolution of Senator Overman.

PROBE MYSTERY KILLING OF TWO AT BIRMINGHAM

A. B. Moore, Southern Railway Superintendent, and Girl Slain.

SHOTGUN FOUND NEAR ONE BODY

Man Apparently Shot While Working On Car On City's Outskirts.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—A. B. Moore, superintendent of the Southern Railway, and an unidentified woman about 22 years old, were found shot to death on the outskirts of this city today.

Moore had been struck in the face with a shotgun charge, police said, while he apparently was working on the motor of his automobile, which had been stopped at the side of the road.

The body of the woman was found some distance from the car with a shotgun charge in her head. Police believe she had been running from the car at the time she was killed. A shotgun was found some distance from her body.

At the offices of the Southern Railway here it was said Moore was married and was the father of two children.

James Stillman Presents His Wife Necklace Worth $500,000

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—James A. Stillman, as a tender expression of his awakened love for his wife and their reconciliation, has presented Mrs. Stillman with a necklace worth in excess of $500,000, says today's New York American in a copyrighted story.

The gift was revealed, the story says, by James (Bud) Stillman, a senior at Princeton, who estimated the value of the necklace at a million dollars.

The necklace is of collar design, one and one-fourth inches wide, and is made of pearls, rubies, sapphires and diamonds, the pearls predominating.

Bud also revealed that his marriage to Lena Viola Wilson, backwoods Canadian girl, would take place June 29 at La Toque, Que-

California Felines Retreat In Confusion From Mouse Hordes.

POISONED GRAIN HALTS "MENACE"

Tens Of Thousands Of Hungry Rodents Are Being Killed.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The cats of Kern county's lowland area are having experiences which rarely ever come into the feline's existence. They are retreating in fear and confusion before the tumbling herds of mice which have infested an area of ninety-square miles around Taft, Maricopa, Fellows and Ford city.

Mered has thrown a small army of cats from its city pound into the area to re-inforce the local cats. The invading hordes were rapidly diminishing today, but not from the efforts of the cats. Poisoned grain sprinkled in newly plowed furrows across the path of the rodent migration is killing them by the tens of thousands.

"The cats run away when they see a drove of mice coming," said Sam Whitmore, a resident of the infested area. "The cats also refuse to eat them. The lobbies seem to be nauseated at the sight of a mouse."

Whitmore has big job. Poison barages of grain are maintained constantly by Whitmore. His home is in the direct line of the migration and one of the big (Continued on Page Nine.)

COMMISSION ON CRIME FAVORED

County Attorneys Declare It Is Needed to Combat Criminals.

Omahan Asks Fund to "Fight Every Application for Parole."

Endorsing the Nebraska Crime Commission and instructing it to get in touch with university authorities to work for recognition of such a commission by the state government, the County Attorneys association went on record Thursday morning as favoring a general drive on crime.

If any good is to be done, various speakers emphasized during the round table discussion, there must be a definite organization with a paid secretary, who will have the information and the public and carry on active war against wrongdoers.

Henry Beal of Douglas county, one of the organizers of the present crime commission, said that every application for parole that comes before the board

"Give me $10,000 and I'll take any man out of the pen in five years under present conditions," he said. "I'll do it without fraud because I'll be willing to spend every dollar of it, while the state won't spend a cent to keep the prisoner in."

"I'd have stories published by car thieves Monday night. The car belonged to E. W. Andrus, Grand Hotel, and was stolen while parked on N street between Thirtieth and Thirtieth. It was stripped of tires, battery, upholstery, and everything of value.

The youthful detectives inspected the car and then, deciding that something was wrong, called the police. They appeared at the police station Thursday morning and inquired about the reward, and insurance company officials said the matter would be considered.

The boys are Martin Gammon, 2277 Potter; Donald Hook, 1907 North Thirtieth; Leslie McDermott, 1225 North Twenty-ninth; Edward Fleck, 1125 North Twenty-sixth; Henry Rupert, 1913 North Twenty-ninth; and Clarence McGowan, 1332 North Twenty-eighth. They were on their way to go skating when they discovered the car.

Charles Matson, former county attorney in Lancaster, was much more optimistic, but he too admitted that development of the scheme all depends on finances.

"I think it is a step in the right direction," he said. "The former state sheriff, was sent out last year to organize the crime commission over the state but because of the nearness of election his motives were questioned and the commission was dropped. Now is a more opportune time for such a move, and information on crime conditions is needed badly."

Would it not be advisable, Mr. Matson asked in closing, to call on the legislature to authorize a commission on recidivists of the criminal laws of Nebraska, co-operation with the national commission?

Only one objection was raised to the general program, and that by a member of the association who objected to too much organization. Another suggested that the public should pay by taxes for benefits.

STERILIZATION OF CRIMINALS IS PROPOSED

Perry Reed Introduces Bill Covering Prison and Insane Asylums.

Would Affect Only Old Offenders—Board Of Control In Charge.

The compulsory sterilization of habitual criminals who are inmates of the state penal institutions, before they may be discharged, was provided in a bill introduced Thursday morning by Senator Perry Reed. The present law provides for the sterilization of inmates of the state hospitals for insane, but only with the consent of the inmate or relative. Reed's bill wipes out this consent provision and makes the operation compulsory, where the board of control passes on the case and finds the person in question to be a habitual criminal or mentally defective.

To make the law still stronger, a fine of from $500 to $2,000, or a jail sentence of from three to six months is provided in case the board or any member of the board shall violate the provision of the law. The last ten days of such a sentence shall be spent by the convicted person on a diet of bread and water.

Under the present law a board of five physicians must pass on the cases and determine if the sterilization operation should be performed. The Reed bill abolishes this board and makes it the duty of the board of control.

SIX BOYS WAIT A DECISION ON REWARD FOR CAR

Six small boys are anxiously awaiting the verdict of an insurance company as to whether they shall be paid a reward for their discovery of a stolen car Wednesday afternoon.

The boys came upon a Ford touring car in a stubble field on North Twenty-seventh street, when it had been stripped and abandoned by car thieves Monday night. The car belonged to E. W. Andrus, Grand Hotel, and was stolen while parked on N street between Thirtieth and Thirtieth. It was stripped of tires, battery, upholstery, and everything of value.

The youthful detectives inspected the car and then, deciding that something was wrong, called the police. They appeared at the police station Thursday morning and inquired about the reward, and insurance company officials said the matter would be considered.

APPOINTMENT OF WILLIAMS IS CONFIRMED

Tax Commissioner's Name Approved By The State Senate.

NO CHANGES ON NORMAL BOARD

T. J. Majors of Peru and Dan Morris Are Again Selected.

With only two dissenting votes, the senate gave its approval Thursday morning to Governor McMillen's reappointment of T. E. Williams of Aurora as state tax commissioner.

Those two votes were cast by Senators Ross and Anspoker of Springfield and George F. Frush of Wahoo. Senator Anspoker later withdrew his negative vote and changed it to an affirmative vote, while Senator Frush let his vote stand on the records.

Governor McMillen also announced his reappointment of Colonel T. J. Majors of Peru and Dan Morris of Kearney as members of the state normal board. Their appointments will be subject to the approval of the senate also but will be presented later. Both men have been members of the board for years. Colonel Majors was one of the originators of the state normal school plan and was one of the first members of the board.

The reappointment of Williams as tax commissioner was expected to meet some opposition in the senate but it was apparently smothered. The announcement of the appointment was made by Governor McMillen a week ago, but it appeared to be withdrawn from formal presentation to the senate until the code secretary appointment storm had blown over.

PLANE LEADS RESCUE GROUP AT CLEVELAND

Many Join in Search for Youth Sighted Wednesday Night on Bobbing Cake of Ice in Lake Erie---Valiant Labors of Searchers Fail to Reveal a Trace.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Hoping for the stroke of luck that some times brings back those who seem doomed to die, efforts went forward feverishly today to rescue from the icy waters of Lake Erie a man or boy sighted last night on a bobbing cake of ice just out of reach of land.

An airplane led the rescue attempt. But hours of vigilance failed to locate the figure sighted from shore last night just as darkness closed over the waters.

James Vaneck saw it from the pier at the foot of East 140th street. He notified authorities and soon the fireboat John A. Farley put out to the rescue. Its searchlights played for hours upon the rolling field of ice without success.

The boat returned to its moorings for a short time just before dawn but went back to the hunt with daylight. Its crew augmented by a force of life guards.

A stiff wind blew shoreward today and added to the fear that the castaway had been toppled from his precarious foothold or crushed in the piling ice jam.

Guards Taken Abroad. The John A. Farley put out into the lake again this morning to resume its watch for the lost. The vessel, in charge of Lieut. Leo McGinnis, stopped at the coast guard station and took on a crew of guards who were prevented from using their own boats because they could not combat the ice.

The youth, adrift on an ice floe, may possibly be one of seven boys who were shown by a check of police records today to be missing from their homes. All these boys are between ages of 10 and 18.

The plight of this latest victim of the lake's treacherous ice movements recalls the experience of Leo Edwards, a Cleveland skater, who escaped misfortune about a week ago when an ice floe carried him far out into the water.

Although hopelessly separated from shore, Edwards managed to reach a water intake crib, five miles from the breakwater. Breaking into the crib, he found fuel and food. He passed the night there and returned to shore the next day in a rowboat kept at the crib.

MURDER CHARGE AGAINST DOCTOR

Alleged To Have Caused Death By Means Of Illegal Operation.

OMAHA, Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dr. Charles E. Barnes of Omaha, was held in jail here today without bond on a murder charge, as the result of an alleged criminal operation performed on Mrs. Newton, 29, of Fremont, bride of a day. Mrs. Newton died Wednesday afternoon at Fremont. Dr. Barnes was arrested here last night.

Mrs. Newton was accused of operating on the girl in his office here Sunday afternoon. He refuses to discuss the charge until he confers with his attorney.

Mrs. Newton was Miss Wealthy Timpe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Timpe, who reside on a farm near Fontenelle, Neb. She was a Sunday school teacher in the community church congregation in Fremont and also had taught a class in the Tolbach church, near her farm home. Clyde Newton is a Fremont electrician and a member of an old Fremont family. No charge has been filed against him.

The couple was to be married in June, but following the alleged operation, Newton insisted on an immediate marriage, which was held at the home of his brother Tuesday. Following the girl's death, Fremont physicians came to Omaha and filed the case before County Attorney Henry Beal.

The vessel will go way of Honolulu, taking the southern route and visit the South Sea Islands, New Zealand, Australia, Straits Settlements, South Africa and South America, returning by way of New York, which port will be reached on May 28.

LINCOLN COUPLE WED. The marriage of Mrs. Emma N. Hutchins of Lincoln, to Samuel A. Foster, also of Lincoln took place this morning at Omaha. Both Mr. and Mrs. Foster are prominent in social circles in Lincoln.

HARDING DENIES WAS IN ROBBERY

Says He Confessed Because He Saw Brother Being Beaten.

LOGAN, Ia., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—General denial of any part in the holdup and robbery of the Modale, Ia., Savings bank, last December 15, was made by Bro. Harding, fisherman of near Blair, Neb., at his trial here today.

Harding said he made "two or three" confessions to the robbery "after watching half a dozen Omaha officers beat up my brother, Dave." He said he was ready to sign anything at that time to "save my brother from such a beating."

The brothers are being tried separately on the same charge.

200 OFFICERS AT BANQUET

Annual Dinner of Sheriffs and County Attorneys Held.

Speakers Give Recommendations for Improving Statutes.

Two hundred attended the third annual banquet of the sheriffs and county attorneys of Nebraska at the Lincoln hotel Wednesday evening. The program consisted of talks by seven prominent men in public life of the state including Lieutenant Governor George A. Williams, Speaker James A. Rodman and Chief Justice Charles J. Goss. W. C. Heelan acted as toastmaster.

The talk by the lieutenant governor was a summary on those things he believes to be the vital needs of the nation today. In closing he said that the main need is a baptism of good citizenship. Mr. Williams also praised the nation for its forward policies and its tremendous strides of progress during its 130 years of existence. Because of these things, he said, the United States has become the wonder and envy of all the nations of the world.

The American people, he declared, are happy people with no set limit by class to cover their aspirations. There is a predominant lack of poverty, a higher standard of living, a greater and better feeling manifested in this country than in any of the old European nations, he added. To the freedom of religious thought and the high plane upon which the church in America stands, Mr. Williams attributes the success of the nation.

He also spoke of the public school as the great bulwark of American citizenship and recommended its maintenance. In speaking of the lawlessness rampant in the world in general, the lieutenant governor said that it is not new laws that are needed but a respect and strict enforcement of the present ones. A new concept of law and order and loyalty are also imperative to the welfare of the nation, he believes.

For Swift Justice.

The administration of justice in a swift but efficient manner was the substance of remarks made by Chief Justice Goss. He told of instances in his experience in which a speedy trial has led to conviction whereas delay would have meant acquittal. He said that the law is the instrument in the placing of justice on a respectful pedestal and in the doing away with many of the crimes.

He spoke of the new respect for young lawyers in the bar, which, he said, is a notable progressive step. The judges now can give without criticism aid to the young attorney whereas formerly most of them brutally abused their power in cases where inexperienced practitioners were involved, he said.

James A. Rodman, speaker of the house of representatives, spoke on legislative problems. He opened his talk by saying that he was of the opinion that nearly all public officials were underpaid and that he felt this to be especially true with county attorneys whom, it is understood, are trying to have their salaries boosted by the present legislature.

He dwelt briefly in stating his opposition to the abolishment of capital punishment. The state and that he believed that criminals were assured of the fact that capital punishment was a fact and rigidly enforced in this state, that they steer clear of it. It is in favor of just imprisonment and is opposed to paroles dealt out in quantities.

The main point stressed in his talk was in regard to his belief for a four year term for the governor and for the legislators. In the case of the chief executive Mr. Rodman would limit his office to one term. For, he contends, from one election to the other the governor of the state plays politics in order to secure a re-election, and instead of conducting himself as a statesman operates as a politician.

In the legislature Mr. Rodman would have two sessions during four years. He would not limit the legislators to one term, however. All of one of the sessions would be devoted to appropriations and the other to general business.

Wants Criminal Statistics.

That Nebraska should enact a law providing for the compilation and preservation of accurate criminal statistics was the recommendation of Charles E. Matson, former county attorney of Lancaster county. He believes that the legislature should listen with attention and careful consideration to the bills and proposals brought before it by the lawyers of the state. He also spoke on the recent recommendations of Chief Justice Taft, believing them to be excellent for passage in Nebraska.

Senator J. W. Cooper spoke in opposition to the advocacy of Speaker Rodman regarding a four year term for the governor, declaring that he might prove so unfit that four years in office would degenerate the state department. Mr. Rodman replied that he might be impeached.

E. B. Pratt of the Burlington railroad also spoke advocating that a law be passed providing pension for widows and children of officers of the law who are killed while on duty. He urged the sheriffs to conduct themselves as gentlemen at all times and to be scrupulously honest and to establish themselves on the right side of every question.

Coolidge Says No. Mind Over Matter. Do One Thing Well.

By Arthur Brisbane.

News from Mexico tells us of a real religious war led, according to the Mexican war office, by the Catholic Archbishop Orozco y Jimenez, of Guadalajara. The archbishop leads his devoted followers under a banner inscribed "Viva Cristo Rey." "Long Live Christ the King."

The Mexican government has on its hands trouble that will not end soon.

For the United States, according to President Coolidge, the Mexican question comes to this:

"Shall property of American citizens in Mexico be confiscated or taken without being paid for?"

President Coolidge answers "no," which will suit the average American.

Has mind power over matter? Yes, Dr. Boyd, experimenting with drugs on fifty subjects, gives half of them the real drug, the other half swallow milk capsules.

Drug victims, in the last stages of affliction are restored by hypodermic injection of distilled water, which they believe to contain morphine. Mind has power over matter, imagination is more powerful than fact.

But mind won't cure cancer, put a filling in a tooth, heal an abscess or set a broken bone. Don't push "mind over matter" too far, especially if there is a good doctor near you.

Seventeen-year-old George Young, who swam the Catalina channel, learns that advertising is cash. He is in vogue at $1,000 a night. Instead of buying a "quiet life bungalow" for his mother in California he will be able to buy her a Beverly Hills house with swimming pool and projection room attached.

Do one thing well. That is what pays.

Mr. Howard Gould's wife sued him and the court gave her $30,000 a year.

Mr. Charlie Chaplin's wife sues him and the court gave her, while she is waiting, $4,000 a month or $48,000 a year. Gould is worth probably $500,000, Chaplin is worth $3,000,000 or $4,000,000.

Everything in this country improves in value, even the rights of an angry wife.

Mussolini plans, says Europe to cut up Albania, giving a little strip to the north to Jugoslavia, another to Greece, keeping the lion's share for Italy.

The Albanians are not successful in governing themselves. Fine roads that run through their country were made by Romans long ago. Italy would have them what they once had from Rome, civilization and more prosperity. (Copyright, 1927.)

FRANCE SAYS IS NO AGREEMENT TO LEAVE RHINELAND

PARIS, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Germany must make it worth while to France if it wants the Rhineland evacuated in advance of the dates fixed by the treaty of Versailles. Foreign Minister Briand Wednesday told the foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies.

The foreign minister emphatically declared that his hands are free on the question of evacuation. Discussing his conversation with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, B. Briand said:

"I entered into no engagement and made no promise to Stresemann. Stresemann expressed the hope that arrangements could be made for the anticipated evacuation in a general conversation at Thoiry, which bound no one."

At Briand then told the committee that the French government was awaiting concrete propositions from Germany concerning an earlier evacuation than called for by the treaty of Versailles.

PROFESSOR RIPLEY HURT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Prof. William Z. Ripley, noted economist of the Harvard Business school, received lacerations of the forehead and slight concussion of the brain last night when the taxicab in which he was riding collided with an automobile. He was removed to a hospital.

The County Attorney's association also spoke briefly. Music of the evening was furnished by Miss Dorothy E. Maxon, violinist with Mrs. D. P. Stough at the piano. Mrs. Stough gave a group of recitations.

PREDICTS GOOD YEAR FOR 1927

Henry W. Stanley Believes Sound Progress Will Be Rule.

A normal 1927 business world with a rather conservative policy but general prosperity is the prediction of Henry W. Stanley, made in his lecture series at the chamber Wednesday evening. About one hundred attended.

He believes that 1926 was an abnormal year but that this year will remain on a steady plane economically with no wild flurries in the stock market and without spasmodic periods of depression or abnormality. Buyers are buying in small quantities to sell and not to make "discouns." He anticipates a great deal of reconstruction for the year's building world and believes that remodeling and renovating will employ more men and involve more capital than the construction of new buildings or the establishment of new industries.

Mr. Stanley's first lecture of the evening was on "The Sale." He spoke of the increased thought directed toward sales promotion and declared that formerly 15 per cent was used in the purchase of goods and 25 per cent in their disposition, whereas this figure is slowly turning around.

He dwelt for a considerable time on the problem of the house to house salesman in competition with the legitimate retailer.

On Retail Advertising.

"Copy is the thing that brings results," declared Mr. Stanley in his lecture delivered Wednesday afternoon on retail advertising. He explained the annex dining room of the chamber of commerce building. Mr. Stanley is giving a series of lectures this week on business subjects.

It is not the medium nor the customer, he said, but the copy that makes for results. In writing copy, Mr. Stanley urged everyone to be themselves and to write to the people that the ad was meant for. The injection of something that will stop and hold the reader is necessary, he said.

"The three R's of advertising are as necessary," Mr. Stanley said, "as the three R's of elementary schooling, and they form the basis of the writing of good, clever copy." The three R's as named by the lecturer were reasonableness, readability and restraint. He gave a short explanation of each of these factors and advised the advertiser to keep them in mind when writing copy.

Mr. Stanley said that he was opposed to comparative price quotation and explained some of the difficulties that were to be encountered by using it.

Archer L. Burnham Is New President Of Reserve Officers

Lieut. Col. Archer L. Burnham was elected president of the Lancaster county Reserve Officers association at its annual election and business meeting Wednesday evening at the Grand hotel. Major H. L. Wilbur, Major E. G. Zimmerman and Captain Chas. E. Anderson were elected vice-presidents of the organization and Lieut. Edgar A. Roschult was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

A discussion followed the election regarding the policy of future meetings. It was decided to hold the regular meetings but to dispense with the dinner. The meetings will be held at Nebraska hall. Other business reports were made and approved.

A musical program presented at the beginning of the program consisted of vocal selections by Abe Hill, state champion high school violinist, accompanied by Robert Mosholder. Fifty attended the affair.

North Carolina 'Anti-Petting' Bill Given Approval

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—The house committee of the North Carolina general assembly has reported favorably upon the "anti-petting" bill introduced by Rev. Oscar Hayward, Baptist minister of Montgomery county. The bill provides for police investigation of parked automobiles and if the occupants were violating any law they would be subject to arrest and the car to seizure.

MALLOCH TELLS NEEDS FOR HOME

Chicago Man Speaks Before Dinner Of Master Builders At Chamber Here.

Douglas Malloch of Chicago, humorist, author and poet, was the speaker Wednesday evening at the banquet of the Lincoln Builders bureau and Master Builders association, at the chamber of commerce. He was introduced by A. L. Bixby and spoke on "Man and Wife." Claude Wilson was toastmaster.

"The home is the greatest institution in the world," Mr. Malloch declared, but in this day and age is given too little attention. Built on the pillars of love, thrift and God, the foundation will crumble and decay the instant a husband and wife neglects to live up to these three principles.

Where there is true love, thrift and God, the speaker said, there is heaven on earth, a home, a place where the little spats and little hurts are as nothing. But let a wife set her house above husband, or husband set business on a pedestal above wife, and love flies out through the back door; the home is no more.

Mr. Malloch was extremely harsh with men. "You men are getting so you have too little time for the home," he said, advising them to show more attention to the wife and children. "One of the greatest troubles with the modern home, he added, is that the man has to go to a restaurant and work together to go through the back door; the home is no more."

A glowing tribute was paid to women when he said "man seldom makes the home. It is the mother. There is nothing more glorious in all the world than a good home presided over by a woman, a mother. Given the character of his mother, the speaker said, a boy never will go wrong."

When husband and wife have regard for the thoughts and feelings of each other and work together to go forward as one, home will be home in fair weather and foul, the speaker concluded.

Mr. Malloch's address followed a chalk talk by Oz Black, Lincoln Star cartoonist.

Mrs. Hartwell Cruise-Kemmer and Ed Ellington sang a group of duets with Mrs. Kemmer at the piano, and Mrs. Kemmer later sang a solo.

C. B. Tow was master of ceremonies. There was fully 400 at the banquet which was held in the main dining room of the chamber. The Leandro string quartet played.

INFECTED CROPS BILL APPROVED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The House bill to permit the department of agriculture to seize infected crops under the plant quarantine act was approved Wednesday by the house agriculture committee.

RECEIVE STATE BUDGET FRIDAY

Solons Will Hear Governor's Message at Joint Session.

Governor Adam McMullen will not present his budget message to the legislature until Friday, according to his announcement Wednesday.

It had been expected by the governor that he would have his message completed for presentation at a joint session to be held Thursday. The governor has been calling in heads of the various departments during the last several days for a final check of the recommendations that are to be made. Wednesday night he remained in his office until nearly midnight, working on the budget.

A rather lengthy and detailed explanatory message will accompany the budget and it is this that is occupying the most of the governor's time.

The two branches of the legislature, however, held a joint session at 2:15 Thursday afternoon for the purpose of listening to an address by A. J. Weaver on agricultural relief legislation that is now before congress.

It was expected that the resolution urging congress to pass some legislation for the benefit of agriculture would be modified to incorporate some of the ideas expounded by Weaver. The resolution as it was adopted by the senate specified no definite action. Governor McMullen, a few days ago, suggested that such a resolution should be more specific.

Wednesday the senate recalled the resolution from the house for purpose of redrafting it.

The joint legislative committee named to confer with the attorney general and the railroad on the matter of reaching some solution to the railroad tax problem, met Wednesday afternoon with the attorney general and the assistants who have been conducting these suits for the state.

The matter was gone over carefully to determine what the state's attorneys believe can be done and to determine the exact status of the suits. The attorneys of the railroad will be asked to confer with the committee at a later date to offer their suggestion.

LOCATE BODIES OF FOUR MINERS

WELCH, W. Va., Jan. 20.—(AP)—The bodies of four miners, trapped in the Caples mine of the Central Pocahontas Coal Co., early Wednesday by an explosion, were located by rescue workers last night. Finding of the bodies accounted for all the men in the mine at the time of the blast.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brillianine, and no grease!

Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

SHURTLEFF NOT TO GO ON TRIAL

Case Against Former Deputy State Sheriff Dismissed by Court.

TECUMSEH, Neb., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—L. E. Shurtleff, former deputy state sheriff, Wednesday was dismissed on a charge of murder by Judge F. C. Radtke of the Johnson county court. Shurtleff was held with bail.

Holden for the killing of William Trute, Tecumseh police officer, on the night of July 3, during a celebration. Holden was tried for the offense last October and was acquitted on a plea of self defense and that his revolver was accidentally discharged. Holden had been stationed in Trute's barn to guard it while Shurtleff went for a search warrant. Trute returned home, and in a scuffle was fatally shot.

Shurtleff was given his preliminary hearing in county court last October and his attorney filed a brief sustaining contentions made by citations of other cases. The state replied and the case has been held up through these proceedings. Judge Radtke held he could not hold Shurtleff as an abettor, as a conspirator, or as one actually connected with crime. The district court had freed Holden of, when Holden had admitted it was his revolver that killed Trute and when Shurtleff was several blocks away when the tragedy occurred.

Woman Seized By Man Who Flees When She Screams

Mrs. E. B. Richardson, 1261 Belmont street, while walking toward her home at 6:30 last evening, was seized from behind by a man at Fourteenth and New Hampshire streets. Following the screams of the woman the man fled and police, who were called by a nearby night watchman, were unable to find any trace of him although they searched the entire neighborhood.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Vision of the Night.

It had been a busy morning at the rectory. Nancy Waybrant, the rector's daughter, had only yesterday returned from visiting some friends in Somerset, and although Martha, cook and general factotum, had done her best to keep things straight during the absence of her young mistress, the place had acquired an odd, unhomelike appearance. In various inconspicuous corners lurked accumulated dust that would never have found a day's abiding-place if Nancy herself had been at home. The hall, with its brush and duster, vases were void of flowers, giving to the rooms a curiously lifeless appearance, as though the soul had gone out of them, leaving only a faint, dim shell behind and the condition of the rector's study was frankly deplorable. Papers and letters lay strewn in wild confusion over his desk while the sheets of next Sunday's sermon were reposing comfortably on the floor.

The rector admitted the state of things with a whimsical smile. He was a tall, thin man, with the delicate face of a scholar and with gray-blue eyes wherein the touch of dreamer and visionary was balanced by an underlying humor. Incredibly absent-minded and always untidy, he depended entirely on his daughter to maintain some sort of order in his study, hence the demoralized aspect which it presented after his brief absence from home. It was she, too, who saw to it that his inner and outer man were properly cared for—the question of meals and suitable apparel being matters which the rector himself was prone to overlook—and who checked with a firm hand the too generous impulses which would have led him to bestow the greater part of his small income upon the necessitous poor of the parish, quite forgetting, in his eagerness to help, that his own butcher's and baker's bills still lay unpaid on his desk!

Nancy gathered up the scattered sheets of the sermon and shook her head at him as she did so.

"It's no use smiling in that ingratiating way, Dad," she said as she proceeded deftly to evolve order out of chaos. "The floor is not the proper place for a sermon."

"It is not," he agreed penitently. "And I'm afraid I can't offer you any explanation as to how it came to be there."

Can, probably, just when you were launching out into 'Thirday,' old Mrs. Milligan or someone turned up to tell you that it was her rent day and that she had been sent to save up half the week's wages in order to pay her rent."

Whereupon, in our usual lordly way, you swept your sermon aside and dived for your cash box I know you!"

The rector's eyes twinkled.

"I rather believe something like that did occur," he acknowledged. "And will go on occurring to the end of the chapter," he said. "But her eyes were very soft."

These two Bernard Waybrant's wife had died when Nancy was hardly more than a year old, so that from her earliest days her father had represented everything in the world to her. He had been both playfellow and counselor, and the most dreary time of her whole life had been the two years of the war which he had spent at the front as a chaplain of the troops. At the end of that time ill-health had driven him reluctantly back to England. With a body too frail for the courageous spirit which dwelt within it, he had been one of the first to volunteer, shirking neither hardship nor danger, and sharing everything, good and bad as it came, with his "boys."

And in return he had fairly idolized him. Some of the best had been recruited from his own parish of Stranwood, and the "padre" of the trenches was still "padre" in the village to the men who had known and loved him out in Flanders.

"And now that you've tidied me up and so added another quota to your feeling of self superiority, what is the next move?" demanded the rector, smiling.

Nancy cast a satisfied glance round her brown eyes lingering happily on the freshly gathered flowers which had made the rooms somehow "come alive" again. Then, as a bell rang loudly in the hall, she tucked her arm into their father's.

"Lunch is the next item on the program," she announced. "And, afterwards, I'm going up to the castle. Lady Mary is sure to have heaps for me to do after I've been away for a whole fortnight."

"One of your indispensable, I perceive," murmured the rector mockingly. In return for which she pinched his arm as she led him into the low-ceiled dining-room.

For over a year now she had been in the habit of going to Stranwood two or three afternoons a week in order to help Lady Mary with the different parish matters in which the large-hearted little person actively interested herself. Beyond this, she wrote letters for her, arranged flowers and made herself useful in a variety of ways, and the small salary she received for these services formed a very welcome addition to the rector's exchequer.

"I'm particularly looking forward to going to Stranwood this afternoon," she remarked. "Martha tells me that Lord Marchdale's god-daughter arrived there while I was away. Have you seen her yet, Dad?"

"She was at church on Sunday," "Oh, was she? Did you speak to her?" eagerly.

"Yes, Lady Mary took pity on my lonely bachelor condition and invited me to lunch. So I met the new arrival."

"What's she like? How old is she? Shall I like her?"

"What a tornado of questions! I certainly don't like her. I should say she's about one or two and twenty, decidedly pretty, with a rather attractive little air of distinction—and has been somewhat spoiled."

"Nancy's face had fallen while he was speaking."

"I hate spoiled people," she observed disappointedly.

"I wasn't meaning 'spoiled' quite in the way in which you're thinking of it," replied Waybrant, his gray-blue eyes reflective. "There's nothing of the potsherd, spoilt child about her. It's rather the woman who's spoiled."

"Padre dear, what do you mean?" begged Nancy appealingly.

"You have gone off on one of your usual big, deep lines of thought and left me no sign of a smile. I think I shall be frightened of her."

"Oh, no, you won't. There's nothing snobbish about her. But she's almost bound to have got hold of a long series of values—a luxurious environment has played such a big part in her life. And a wrong sense of proportion may lead one to mistake the value of the substance."

"He paused, then added musingly: 'She'll be a splendid woman one day—when she has found herself.'"

Her curiosity sharpened by the conversation she had had with her father, Nancy set off briskly after lunch in the direction of the castle, which lay no more than a mile distant from the village of Stranwood.

Servants invariably seemed to have a way of coming to the door for the rector's daughter, and Mifflord, the impeccable Strangways' butler, who admitted her, even unbent so far as to smile as she bade him a good morning.

Her usual custom, she made her way to the sun-parlor—a delightful octagonal room, built out from the main body of the house, which was reached by a flight of steps.

Here she found it tenanted only by Patricia and Kit. The latter sprang quickly to his feet at her entrance.

"Nancy!" he exclaimed.

And Patricia, glancing up from her occupation of picking up the stitches Lady Mary had dropped in the scarf she was knitting, destined ultimately to adorn the head-gardener's latest baby, surprised a sudden, untroubled smile.

"Usually lady eyes. Being a woman, it afforded her considerable enlightenment, and it was with increased interest that she turned to greet the newcomer at Kit performed the necessary introduction."

The two girls presented a striking contrast. In spite of her youth and boyish slowness of outline, Patricia had acquired a certain elusive beauty during the years she had spent at the Rectory at Coomara, whilst about Nancy there was an ingenuously cauterized that was not without its own charm. She appeared younger than her twenty years, and it was a very innocent face which smiled shy friendliness at Patricia—a round little face framed in soft brown hair and with wide-open brown eyes. The nose was nondescript—merely a nose—as Kit had kindly informed her on one occasion—and the lovely mouth curved readily into sweet-tempered laughter.

Her shyness soon vanished, however, and in a short time she was chattering away as happily as though she were back in the shabby homely old rectory.

"You know, I was really quite alarmed at first at the idea of meeting you, Miss Luttrell," she said, nodding her head seriously. "I thought it would be rather inferior, and all that—waving her hand expansively."

"So she is," replied Kit with extreme gravity. "Haven't you found it out yet? At any rate, even if you haven't you needn't rub it in that you think she's such an inferior kind of person."

Nancy frowned him down.

"Don't be stupid," he retorted. "At least, not stupider than you can."

"WIGGLE YOUR TOES GOT A CORN?"

"We Made a Jar of 'End-O-Corn' for YOU. Very Dainty Is Waiting for it."

Bad Stomach For Years, Now Has New One

"My stomach was bad and I suffered terribly from indigestion. I began to take Adlerika and feel like a new person. My bowels and stomach have improved wonderfully."—E. Huber.

Unlike most medicines, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, giving the intestines a REAL cleansing and bringing out old poisonous matter you never thought was in your system. Even if bowels move daily, you will be surprised how much more old matter Adlerika brings out which may have been causing all your trouble. In slight disorders, like occasional constipation, GAS bloating, indigestion or sick headache, ONE spoonful always brings relief.

Adlerika is a compound of the most saline, intestinal cleanser with glycerine, buckthorn, cascara and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. It is excellent for intestinal strains, a disease due to modern ways of living and which is often the true cause of sour stomach, GAS bloating, nervous dyspepsia and restless sleep.

Doctors Praise Adlerika. Dr. H. L. Shoup, New York: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. C. Cull: "I prescribe Adlerika, with highly satisfactory results."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. L. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. A few impurities were eliminated from my system."

Dr. F. M. P. (name withheld by request): "I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose."

No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. At leading drugists. In Lincoln at Harley Drug Co.—Advertisement help. Miss Luttrell understands what I meant, don't you?"—appealing to Patricia. "You see, living in a sort of state, like a princess, with sheaves of servants to wait on you?"

"Oh, but I want!" interrupted Patricia, laughing outright. "There was nothing at all regal about it. And everybody has sheaves of servants to wait on them in India, you know. A commissioner has rather more than other people, because he has a lot of government work to do, and entertains a good deal, too."

"Still," Nancy regarded her pensively. "I think Strangways was quite an appropriate place for you to come to. You wouldn't have liked an ordinary small house with just two servants or perhaps with only a maid-of-all-work. It's a bit of a rectory. You'd hate doing 'chores.'"

There was considerably more insight in the remark than perhaps Nancy herself was aware of.

"Fortunately, she's never likely to have to do her own 'chores,'" said Kit, "a beneficent providence having endowed her with sufficient of this world's goods to pay some one else to do them for her."

"It must be heavenly to be like that!" sighed Nancy with a frank and ingenuous yearning that was wholly devoid of the bitterness of envy. "It's the same with Mrs. Bethune, of course. I don't suppose she's even darning her own stockings!"

"It sounds as though that typified delicious heights of bliss," observed Kit.

Nancy nodded vigorously.

"So it does. You've no idea what those Dad makes in his socks, stamping round the parish every day. They're like little craters."

"Who is Mrs. Bethune?" asked Patricia idly, when the laughter which greeted Nancy's heart-felt description of the state of her father's socks had subsided.

"Oh, of course, you won't have met her yet. She lives with her brother at Antony Roy, but they've been away in London since April."

"They're so rich it makes me sometimes, just thinking about it," declared Nancy.

"New rich?" inquired Patricia indifferently.

"Oh, no," replied Kit. "They're friends of ours. There was an unconscious little touch of the old Earl in the way in which he diffused the sheep from the goats by those few words which brought a smile to Patricia's lips, and the thought flashed fugitively through her mind that pride of race dies hard, even in these democratic days."

"Mark Strawn—Peggy Bethune's brother—is practically a millionaire pursued Kit. All the money from both sides of the family tumbled in to him, and the man Peggy married—she's a widow now—wasn't precisely destitute, either—with a zzzz. 'They're a lot better off than we poor land owners.'"

"I don't envy any land, then?" "Oh, enough, you know. Antony Roy is an absolute duck of a place. I don't own about half the county, like my unlucky uncle, so they're not plagued with tenants always clamouring for repairs and improvements."

"I think they live a sort of fairy-tale existence," said Nancy. "Antony Roy is an absolute duck of a place. I don't own about half the county, like my unlucky uncle, so they're not plagued with tenants always clamouring for repairs and improvements."

"And nobody on earth to consider but each other," supplemented Kit with a note of envy in his voice.

"And what are they like themselves, these fortunate people?" Patricia asked, smiling. "So far, you've only expatiated on their surroundings."

"Well, Mrs. Bethune isn't exactly pretty, but she's distinctly attractive, and wears lovely frocks and her hair is always done in the latest style. She's the sort of person who never has a shiny nose, you know—not even in hot weather," expounded Nancy.

"Let her try India," commented Patricia dryly. "And is she as nice as she looks?"

"Nicer," affirmed Nancy wholeheartedly. "And Mr. Strawn is a perfect gentleman. I don't wonder she's so fond of him. He just spoils her. He must be an adorable brother to have."

As she finished speaking, the door opened to admit Lady Mary. "Ah, there you are, my dear," she said, greeting Nancy affectionately. "Mifflord told me you were here. You can't think—laughing—how glad I am to have you back. The Village Clothing Club accounts would have got into a dreadful muddle while you were away. I'm afraid, if Jonathan hadn't come to my rescue, I should have helped you with those," suggested Patricia reproachfully. "Why won't you ever make use of me?"

"We keep you securely for ornamental purposes," submitted Kit impudently.

"There was no need to trouble you, dear child," said Lady Mary. "Jonathan is always ready to do any little odd job like that. In fact," with a half-humorous, half-indignant smile, "it would hurt his feelings dreadfully if I'd asked someone else to do anything he might have done."

He only just tolerates me, you know," put in Nancy cheerfully. "He used positively to glare when first I came here. Now I think he's resigned to the fact of my coming and goings and regards me as a necessary evil."

"Poor old man! His eagerness to be of service to us outruns his strength nowadays," said Lady Mary kindly. "Come, Nancy, we'll go to my sitting room and you shall straighten out all the tangles I've got into in your absence," she added, smiling.

Kit jumped up to open the door for them as Nancy followed Lady Mary out of the room, he bent down and spoke to her in a low voice.

"I may see you home—afterwards."

She made no answer, but a quick flush ran up under her clear skin till even the tips of her ears glowed. "Why she had gone, Kit seemed to fall under a spell of silence. He stood staring moodily out of the window, his gray blue eyes clouded and despondent, and for a few minutes Patricia watched him sympathetically without speaking.

"At last she said quietly: 'We did agree to be pals, didn't we, Kit?'"

He swung round, and for a moment

ent his charming smile chased away the shadows from his eyes. "I should rather think we did," he replied heartily. "You're not thinking of going back on the bargain, are you?"

She shook her head.

"Of course not. But what I thought was—if we pals—couldn't you tell me what the trouble is? Has she said 'no'?"

He shook his head and a very brief, tender little smile crossed his lips.

"Then—then—"

"Why don't we get married and live happily ever after? It that what you want to know?"

She smiled.

"I think it is. There doesn't seem any just cause and impediment. She's a great dear, Kit!"

His eyes flashed her a quick glance of gratitude. Then his face darkened.

"Don't you remember my telling you that everything here was offered up on the altar of family pride?" he said bitterly. "Well, that is the impediment. If I suggested that I wanted to marry Nancy, old Uncle Blair would simply storm the place down. It—it sounds perfectly beastly even to say it—with an angry, shamed look in his eyes."

"But to put it badly, my uncle wouldn't think Nancy was good enough."

"Oh, Kit!" exclaimed Patricia in dismay. "Are you sure?"

"Quite sure,"—necessarily. "It would be merely a case of Aunt Mary and her doctor-man over again. Uncle Blair's just about a century behind the times in his outlook on things."

"I've you spoken to him about it?"

"Spoken to him? Good Lord, no! He'd simply be abominable to Nancy if I did, and I won't have her treated—and he'd probably forbid her ever coming to the place again. And, you know, the bit Aunt Mary pays her is a sort of help. The Waybrants are frightfully hard up. The present Mr. father, who had the living before him, was rather a gay old bird in his day and left mounds of debt behind him which the padre is religiously paying off."

"How like him!" she exclaimed. "You know," she went on a little wistfully, "there's something about him that reminds me of my father. I think I've ever been in trouble, I'd like to go to the padre for advice."

Kit nodded understandingly.

"Yes, I know what you mean. Unfortunately in this particular case I'm with a very smile—he's rather off the map as a consultant."

Patricia's brows drew together.

STOP BAD BREATH

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do not irritate the stomach, and they do not cause any disagreeable effects.

Dr. J. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their pleasant taste. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 15c 30c 60c. All druggists.—Advertisement.

"Are you sure—sure that god-father would be so frightfully opposed? You know, I thought, when Mr. Waybrant was here last Sunday to lunch, that he seemed to like him quite a lot."

"Oh, he does," admitted Kit readily. "As a person, in his sphere, as he would say—mimicking his uncle's crusty speech. 'But when it came to a question of Nancy and me, it would put things on quite a different plane altogether.'—very grimly."

"What are you going to do, then?" "What can we do?"—irritably. "Except wait indefinitely, make a bolt for it some day, I've got enough private means to rub along on. Kerry and I each came in for a certain amount of our own when we reached twenty-five years of age irrespective of Uncle Blair's money. Only Nancy would hate it—I mean doing anything like running off."

"Of course she would. And it would make it very difficult for the padre afterwards—as well as for Lady Mary."

"Yes—sincerely. 'Poor little Aunt Mary has had such a rotten time all her life—her own love-affair squashed out of existence and then losing Kerry.'"

"And, if you ran off and got married—"

Careless Washing Spoils the Hair

The simple hair styles of today make beautiful hair a necessity. Luck! beautiful hair is now easily obtained. It is simply a matter of shampooing.

Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women everywhere now use Multisilf Coconut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Multisilf Coconut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. A four ounce bottle lasts for months. Advertisement.

DEBATE DEFERS VOTE ON SMITH

Unofficial Polls Show
Senator-Designate Not To Be Seated.

Reed Says Appointment
Was Result of Fraudulent Election.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—With few of them doubting that the answer would be in the negative, senators Wednesday debated for five and a half hours whether or not Senator Smith of Illinois, shall ever temporarily have a seat among them, and then deferred a vote until today.

Unofficial polls made late in the day by some leaders showed forty-six senators, mostly democratic and republican insurgents, against seating Smith pending an investigation of his case, and thirty-nine senators, including three democrats and the republican old guard, for administering the oath of office immediately and investigating him afterwards. The polls took into account ten senators who are expected to be paired.

This line-up was closer than had been expected before Smith arrived here Tuesday, bearing credentials of appointment by Governor Small as the successor to the late Senator William B. McKinley. The senator began what may prove an historic fight, but as the argument proceeded along legal lines, with few flashes of repartee to relieve its dullness, the crowds thinned out.

Smith Hears Proceedings.
Through it all, save for a few minutes devoted to lunch, Smith sat in a massive high-backed chair—a regular piece of senate furniture placed against the east wall of the chamber on the republican side. Except when members of the house, with whom he once served, stepped up to greet him he followed the argument closely.

As the day wore on, however, the chairman of the Illinois committee, commission plainly showed signs of fatigue as did most of the senators and he frequently changed positions in his chair, crossing first one leg and then another and finally resting with his head back against his left hand.

Entering the chamber some time before the session started, the senator-designate was conducted to his place by Senator Deneen, republican, Illinois, who opened the fight to have his credentials accepted and the oath immediately administered.

Reed Leading Fight.
Leading the group of senators in opposition, stood Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, whom Smith faced at Chicago last July, to assume full responsibility for the acceptance by the managers of his senatorial primary campaign of $150,000 from operators of public utilities over which the committee had control. The acceptance of these contributions from the basis not only of the effort now being made to prevent Smith from taking a seat, but of a renewed effort that will be made if he presents his credentials at the next session of congress to which he was elected last November.

In presenting Smith's credentials, Deneen declared they were in regular order, that Smith complied with all of the qualifications set out in the constitution and should be seated. He then offered this resolution:

"Whereas, Frank L. Smith, claiming to be a senator from Illinois, has presented his credentials which are regular and in due form and there being no contestants for the seat, therefore be it

Deneen Cites Precedents.
"Resolved that the oath of office be now administered to said Frank L. Smith. Be it further

"Resolved that his credentials and all charges which may be filed against him and all objections that may be raised as to his rights to a seat in the senate, be, and the same are, hereby referred to the committee on privileges and elections and that that committee is hereby directed to hear all charges and objections which may be submitted and to make a report to the senate after due consideration and as early as may be convenient."

After Senator Deneen had presented some thirty-nine cases regarded as precedents, Senator Reed of Missouri, offered a substitute proposing that the oath of office be denied pending an investigation by the elections committee.

Still later, Senator Overman, North Carolina, ranking democrat on the judiciary committee, offered a substitute for the Reed resolution proposing that the oath be administered to Smith without prejudice as to any charges that might be brought against him.

Presenting his resolution to deny the oath before an investigation, Senator Reed of Missouri, asserted that the testimony before his committee, recently presented to the senate, disclosed that Smith's election "was wickedly and fraudulently accomplished" and that the senate must take cognizance of this at this time because Smith's appointment "springs from, and comes out of that election."

Radium For King Ferdinand Loaned By the Belgians

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Radium to the value of $8,000,000 (approximately $400,000) has been loaned from Belgium and will be used in treatment of King Ferdinand. The king, who already has undergone two preliminary surgical operations for an intestinal infection, technically described as "recto-sigmoiditis" has so far improved, it is announced, as to warrant the employment of more radical measures.

King Albert of the Belgians, who was informed of the decision of King Ferdinand's medical operations for an intestinal infection, personally made arrangements for the loan and shipment of the radium.

CHAPLIN BOND IS SET AT MILLION

Receivers Report Comedian's Bank Accounts
About $1,000,000.

Attorney Will Ask For
Charlie's Arrest If Alimony Is Not Paid.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—William K. Young, attorney for Lita Grey Chaplin, last night declared he would ask for the arrest of Charlie Chaplin if the $4,000 a month temporary alimony awarded in the pending divorce action is not paid when the comedian comes under the jurisdiction of the superior court here. Chaplin, who is in New York, has ninety days in which to answer the summons in his wife's action. Service of the summons by publication was begun this week.

Chaplin automatically comes under the jurisdiction of the Los Angeles courts in sixty days. However, he has an additional thirty days within which to answer the divorce complaint.

Young's announcement came on the heels of action by Superior Judge Walter P. Guerin in ordering the Chaplin Studios, Inc., to post security bonds of $1,000,000 to protect the interests from the receivership appointed to handle the Chaplin properties. This high amount was fixed after the receivers reported to the court that Chaplin's accounts with both American and British banks, approximated $1,000,000.

Government Demands Bond.
Adding to Chaplin's legal woes, federal authorities announced that the actor must file a bond of approximately $1,000,000 within ten days as a result of the government's income tax liens for $1,073,721.

The receivers read a list of personal and corporate assets totalling $1,408,937, all readily convertible, and with $313,372 of this representing cash on deposit in banks.

The balance of the assets, books of the corporation and other data from the safe and vault of the studio company was given by Judge Guerin as one of the reasons why he placed the appeal bond at such a high figure.

Say Assets Concealed.
In asking that the amount of the bond be a large one, Attorney Young declared that one of the Chaplin pictures, "The Gold Rush," had been bringing in an average of $200,000 a month for its first year and has a potential life of five years.

He charged that there are concealed assets belonging to Chaplin and that the comedian shipped the unfinished negative of his latest picture by air mail to the manager of his New York office with instruction for it to be kept there until the settlement of Chaplin's marital difficulties.

The question of whether the bond will be posted will be determined by the New York offices of the Chaplin interests, Gavin McNab of San Francisco, attorney for Chaplin Studios, Inc., said last night.

EXHIBITS NUMBER OVER 200,000 IN FURNITURE TRIAL

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—(A.E.)—Government exhibits in the prosecution of sixty-six individuals and seven furniture manufacturing companies for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust reached above 200,000 Wednesday and oral testimony seemed far away after ten days devoted to that sort of evidence.

Uplift of the industry was dealt with in one letter read by Roger Shale, special assistant United States attorney general, in charge of the prosecution.

REED DEPLORES CENTRALIZATION

Asks Elimination of Hordes Of Officials
"Devouring" People.

Reversion to Principles
Of Federated Government Demanded.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—After delivering a speech in which he denounced the "hordes of snappers swarming over the land like the lice of Egypt," United States Senator James A. Reed, democrat of Missouri, was hailed by John C. McKoon of Philadelphia, president of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' association, last night as a prospective president of the United States.

Says "Time to Think."

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Pleading for the elimination of "hordes of officials, tax gatherers, snappers and spies who swarm over the land like the lice of Egypt devouring the substance of the people," Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, last night advocated a determined reversion to the constitutional principles of federated government and the re-establishment of human liberty as the high aim of political activity.

Speaking before the annual convention of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' association, the senator summarized his political philosophy, pointed to a score of problems pressing for disposition and presented a statement of the principles which he believed should control in consideration of the more far-reaching issues.

Declaring that the time had come when American statesmen must begin to think of an American policy, Mr. Reed said that policy should first of all keep us free from intrusive ambitions, hatreds and wars of the old world.

"Our great harbors should be completed; desert wastes turned into fruitful farms; great rivers improved, so that they bear upon their bosoms a mighty commerce. Asks Water Power Development.

"Water power should be harnessed and natural power now going to waste made the obedient servant of man.

"Illiteracy should be stamped out. The wave of corruption should be turned back and the malefactors brought to book.

"Inequalities of taxation remain to be adjusted.

"These and many other problems are to be solved."

The Missouri senator said the difficulties of government would be greatly simplified "if we could always keep in mind that each husband is endowed by his Creator with the absolute right to live his own life, choose his own occupation, select his own habitation, eat and drink whatsoever he chooses, and above everything else, to think as his brain dictates, to fully express his opinions, to adopt his own creed and to worship according to his own conscience."

Senator Reed reiterated his hostility to the League of Nations and World Court and declared that at the Washington arms conference the United States "surrendered the dominion of the seas, then within our grasp."

Chicago Cops Get An Increase In Pay

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—A belated Santa Claus brought cheer today to Chicago policemen and fire fighters in the form of a $300 a year pay boost, making the city's uniformed forces among the best paid in the world.

The raises were provided for in the annual budget passed by the city council last night, and boosted the pay of patrolmen to $2,790 a year, and fire fighters to $2,590. The highest paid police captains will receive $4,000 a year and division fire marshals $4,500.

A number of other city employees also received wage increases in the budget, which totalled $213,259,346 for 1927. The new wage scale is retroactive to January 1.

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff. If you don't, it doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night. When rinsing; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and itching of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—Advertisement.

CHIPPS ENTERED HOME WITH MAN

Surprise Witness Who Accompanied Lumberman Will Testify.

Norris Defense Tries to Impeach Testimony of Mrs. Parker.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The ground-work for the testimony of a surprise witness for the defense, declared to have accompanied D. E. Chipps up the stairway leading to the office of Dr. J. Frank Norris on Chipp's fatal visit to the Fort Worth minister's study last July, was laid in the Norris murder trial here Wednesday.

The witness is D. L. Redmon of Fort Worth, who will be placed on the stand to relate his story of Chipp's call on Dr. Norris, which ended in the slaying.

Defense attorneys indicated Redmon would be presented as one of the three men who last saw Chipp's alive. The others are Dr. Norris, who shot and killed Chipp, and L. H. Nutt, member of the minister's church board, who has testified he witnessed the slaying.

R. R. Ridgeway, Fort Worth attorney and a member of Dr. Norris' church, testified late Wednesday that he saw Chipp and Redmon mount the stairway to the pastor's office.

Ridgeway testified that he sat in his automobile, near Norris' office on that afternoon waiting for his wife who works on The Searchlight, the Norris church publication. Witnessed Two Enter Parsonage.

Two men passed him, he said just a few minutes before Chipp was shot. Ridgeway was in a position where he could see about half way up the stairway leading to the church offices on the second floor of the building adjoining the First Baptist church at Fort Worth.

One man was large and was dressed in a dark suit, Ridgeway testified. "The other man was smaller and he was in his shirt sleeves. The smaller man appeared to be giving the other one directions. When they got opposite me near the stairway, the larger man said:

"Well, how in hell will I know him when I see him?"

"The large man was D. E. Chipps and the other was D. L. Redmon." Asked by defense counsel, Marvin Simpson, where Redmon was at present, the witness said he was waiting in the witness room.

Ridgeway testified that he went immediately up to Dr. Norris' office as soon as he heard the shot and that Norris said to him:

"I hated it mighty bad, but I had to do it."

Saw No Woman Enter.
There was apparently an attempt by the defense to impeach testimony of Mrs. Roxie Parker, star state witness, who testified she saw the killing from the door of Norris' office.

Ridgeway testified he did not see a woman go up or come down the stairway, although he was on the stairway within a "minute and a half or two minutes" after the shots were fired.

Mrs. Phoebe Gilliam, wife of the manager of The Searchlight, followed Ridgeway up the stairway, she testified. She said no other woman went up or down the steps.

Ridgeway's testimony was the high spot of a day devoted to presenting further details of the killing. One of these details was a telephone conversation Chipp's is alleged to have had with Dr. Norris just before the lumberman went on his fatal mission to the pastor's study.

NEW MEXICO U. HEAD REMOVED

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Dr. David Spence Hill, who came to New Mexico seven years ago from Illinois to become president of the University of New Mexico, was removed from that office Tuesday. The board of regents appointed last week by Gov. R. C. Dillon, organized Tuesday and immediately granted Dr. Hill a leave of absence until his contract expires next September.

The board's action climaxed a long fight on Dr. Hill by certain elements in Albuquerque and throughout the state, which charged he was unpopular with the students and that his "arbitrary" administrative methods were harming the institution.

CIVIL WAR VET IS BURNED TO DEATH

Had Lived Alone in One Room Home in East Omaha and Had Money.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Fred Austin, 81, civil war veteran, was burned to death when his one room home in East Omaha was destroyed by fire last night. Burned beyond recognition, Austin's body was found among the charred remains of the house, the face down, near the door indicating he had attempted to escape. His wife, Mrs. John Stowell, who discovered the fire, was burned about the same when they tried to check the blaze with pails of water.

Austin is survived by his widow and a daughter. He refused to live with his family, however, preferring to live alone. P. M. Kealey, his son-in-law, expressed the belief Austin had been killed by some one who tried the home to cover up the deed. He said the aged man had between 500 and $1,000 which he may have been keeping in his house and said he will ask an investigation.

Austin served four years in the civil war on gunboats patrolling the Mississippi and was with Commodore Farragut when he ran the gauntlet of Confederate batteries at Vicksburg.

Kiwanis Club At Beatrice Is Now Twelve Years Old

(Special to The Star.)
BEATRICE, Neb., Jan. 20.—Members of the Kiwanis club here heard an interesting address Wednesday by Prof. G. E. Spidell of Waverly on "Vocational Training." The speaker laid particular stress on special training along agricultural lines for the boys and girls of the farm. The day being the twelfth anniversary of the Kiwanis club, Prof. Spidell, who had been elected to the organization, President Buckley announced that the club had provided a fund for high school graduation dress prizes, a total of $20 to be given in four prizes. The object is to treat more interest in sewing among girls. The club also voted to give $21 for debating club prizes. The Kiwanis Glee club has accepted an invitation to give a program at Fairbury in the near future.

STRATTON BANDS GIVE A CONCERT

(Special to The Star.)
STRATTON, Neb., Jan. 20.—A double concert was given at Veterans' memorial hall Tuesday evening by the Stratton concert band and the Stratton school band, the proceeds of which will be used for the purchase of uniforms.

That part of the program given by the adult band consisted of compositions by the old masters, such as Beethoven, Bach, and others, interspersed with more recent composers. For the first time the oboe and bassoon were introduced by local artists, those instruments being well handled by students of but a few months' practice.

The renditions by the school band are suggestive of what may be expected from these contenders for honors at the tri-state contest to be held at North Platte in March.

McKELVIE TALKS ON FARM WORTH

Speaking on the subject, "What Is a Farm Worth?" at the regional convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Chicago, Thursday, S. R. McKelvie, publisher of The Nebraska Farmer, said in part:

"A farm is worth what it will earn. In order to realize upon this truth, and bring agriculture into line with industry, I would favor greater efficiency of production and distribution, and control of output. The American farmer is not one-half as efficient as any other agricultural producer in the world in this respect. He has improved his condition five-fold in the last half century. Yet the farm lags behind the factory by about one-half in productive results.

"The extent to which more economical production may be secured on the farm is proved repeatedly in comparison among individual farmers. For instance, twenty farmers in eastern Nebraska last year produced average yields of seventy-five bushels of corn per acre, while the average for that region was twenty-six bushels. Similar comparison may be made in every branch of agriculture through the nation. These results are secured under ordinary farm conditions. They are due entirely to better management and the more effective use of modern machinery.

"But greater per unit production is not the entire answer to increased farm prosperity. Agriculture is plagued by surpluses. First in one line and then in another. If all farmers were to produce efficiently as they could this condition would be greatly accentuated, and the consequent drop in prices might make their condition worse instead of better.

"The factory supports mass production with the most efficient methods of distribution. There is a constant search for new uses and new markets for the products of industry. Agriculture must follow this course. To utilize the maximum improvement in quality, standardization wherever it can be effected, grading to meet the requirements of an exacting buying public, the popularization of trade-marks and brands, the use of advertising and stimulating demand by the most approved method of selling. Also, it contemplates the elimination of every unnecessary agency between producer and consumer.

"After having stated the maximum effort in efficient production and economical distribution, the factory safeguards prices by limiting production to profitable demand. This is accomplished largely through the control of industry. The factory of industry is not worked beyond the point of public consumption. This has not resulted in lower wages for labor. To the contrary, they have been increased, but the number of working hours per day and per week have been substantially shortened. If the farm were factoryized, these results would follow.

"Under present conditions, the farmer produces surpluses not only at the moment, but in the future. But with damaging results for the future. The population of the United States increased over 20 per cent in the last fifteen years. At this rate, it will be nearly 40,000,000 in the next twenty years. A greater increase in the population of the United States is today. The American farmer can feed and clothe these people economically if the productivity of the land is maintained, but it cannot do it under the present production of natural resources, the greatest of which is the native fertility of the land.

"The only way to insure against nonproductive acres or too great cost of production in the future is to farm fewer acres now and do the job better. Happily this harmonizes with the most approved farm practices. Greater crop yields and the more profitable handling of livestock is facilitated by rotating crops with the grain.

"Nearly all of the Nebraska farmers who produced seventy-five bushel per acre yields in the ten acre corn contest last year did this. Thereby every interest is served. The farmer greatly increased unit production, shortened his hours of labor, reduced the cost of hired labor to the minimum, adjusted production to demand and safeguarded the interest of himself and the nation for the future.

"Unless these things are done, we had as well abandon the theory of an American market for the American producer. As it is now, the farmer labors at a great disadvantage. He is obliged to exchange his labor for factory labor at the ratio of 80 to 135 based on pre-war conditions. This takes the value out of his land and reduces his capacity both as producer and consumer."

FORD PURCHASE CALLED BARGAIN

Jewett Says $12,500 For Each Share Was a Good Buy.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 20.—(By The Associated Press.)—Henry Ford "made the best deal of his life when he bought out Ford Motor Co. minority stockholders in 1913, and he told Harry M. Jewett, former president of the Paquet-Detroit Motor Co., Jewett said Wednesday during the hearing of the government's effort to obtain approximately $3,000,000 annual income, taxes from the sellers.

It was a $108,000,000 bargain. Mr. Ford paid $12,500 cash for each of the 8,625 minority shares outstanding. The government in 1913 tested the minority to a figure of $3,488.34 a share as of 1913, taking the difference between that amount and the sales price as profit. In 1925 the treasury department revised the estimate to a figure finally settled at $3,647.54. It claims tax on the margin between that and the 1913 valuation.

The revaluation was at first even lower and approximately $4,000,000 was asked, finally becoming slightly over $30,000,000.

Haynes Testifies.

Elsewhere in his testimony Jewett paid tribute to the Ford company, who started to make it the best dollar for dollar value in the industry." Jewett was called in the afternoon by counsel for former stockholders and was asked much the same questions by Joseph E. Dales, then chief counsel as was Frederick J. Haynes, chairman of the board of directors of Dodge Brothers, in the morning.

A long hypothetical question put to each required him to estimate the earnings, production and dividend data on the Ford company prior to 1913 and to his general knowledge, the value of the company as of March 1, 1913. Each arrived at a figure in excess of even the valuation which the government now calls too high.

Jewett said $250,000,000 for the company would be a "bargain." This would have given each of the 20,000 shares in existence a value of $12,500. Jewett set $240,000,000 as a cheap figure.

Both praise Ford.

The share value on this basis would have been $12,000. Gregg cross examined the two motor manufacturers on similar lines.

Both spoke glowingly of Henry Ford. Jewett said he had no business judgment, stood in a class by himself, and had a splendid organization, producing a product for which there was a market "beyond comprehension."

Haynes said that the reason Dodge Brothers went into the business of making automobiles was that they foresaw that the Ford company would become so large it would no longer purchase parts from any outside source, and did not wish to have their plant, which in 1913 was solely occupied with making various Ford parts, become idle.

Sciatic - Neuritis

The sciatic nerve, situated at the back of the hip joint, is frequently the subject of Neuritis, giving rise to the painful disease Sciatica. The symptoms are intense pains which shoot down the thigh to the foot, often aggravated by walking and with painful points along the course of the nerve, very tender to the touch.

The trouble is a very obstinate one and does not readily respond to ordinary treatment. It takes more than the usual pain relievers even to alleviate the pain. The best way to get relief from the persistent nerve-racking pains of Neuritis is to get a bottle of Allenburh Special Formula No. 2, which comes in capsule form. Take them as directed at about 24 hours you should be able to notice that they have considerably reduced, if not almost banished, all pain and soreness. Continue faithfully and in a reasonable time you should be able to work and again in comfort once again. Harley Drug Co. keeps Allenburh Special Formula No. 2, in stock all the time and sells lots of it—Advertisement.

BEGLIO GOES INTO MOURNING FOR CHARLOTTE

BRUSSELS, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The Belgian court went into ten weeks mourning Wednesday for Charlotte, widow of Maximilian, once emperor of Mexico. She died at 7 o'clock yesterday morning in the eighty-seventh year of a life that had been hardly more than a tragic haze since 1867. In that year, Maximilian was executed at Queretaro, Mexico, and Empress Charlotte, who was in Europe trying to gain aid for his unstable empire, lost her reason, never to recover it save in rare and fleeting moments, one of which came just before her death from influenza and pneumonia.

With a pearl rosary clasped in folded hands, the body of Charlotte lies in state in the chateau de Bouchout, not far from Brussels. Two black-robed nuns and two ladies of the household kneel in constant prayer beside the death bed.

On Saturday the body will be taken to Lasken and there interred in the royal crypt among the resting places of Belgium's legal dead. The funeral will be national in character and large military display will be a feature of the obsequies.

In all Catholic churches in the Lincoln diocese on January 23 an appeal for support of the Catholic Near East Welfare association will be made at the direction of the Right Rev. Francis J. L. Beckman, D. D., bishop of Lincoln who has officiated at the annual meeting and program of the association.

The Lincoln appeal is part of a nationwide campaign now begun to enlist one million permanent members in the association. It will be worked on the same plan as the campaign of eighty other dioceses in the United States, three cardinals and eighty-one archbishops and bishops having heartily endorsed the effort to secure American interest in the association's program.

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

Youth to Youth.

Dear Minerva: I have never written to you before, but always read your Mail and find it very interesting. There has been many a time when some letter made me want to write, but I always put it off until it was too late. Now I would like to say something of the young folks of today and wonder with the rest how it will all come out.

The thing which really prompts me to write is this: First I want to say, I am not old, I'm only 21, married and the mother of a baby, but even at that I guess I'm not one of the young folks for there are all from twelve up. Before I was married, I went to dances, had friends and good times, and some before my baby was born. However it had been only recently that it had been so I could leave her and go out again with hubby for a little good time. So I went, to a dance during the holidays, prepared to enjoy myself as always. I was surprised to see so many of the "little boys" and "girls" who were just starting to school when I quit there acting as big as you please. I thought my boy, they have grown, I feel ancient. I thought nothing wrong about it though until they started to dance, and Oh Minerva, how vulgar some of them were. Now I'm not saying all but the majority. And they really believed that it was smart. Girls with their dresses so short, that it was a disgrace for them to stand, let alone dance. (I was wearing short too, but decently short.) Boys so drunk that they had no respect for anyone. Of course they were not allowed to stay when the proper one found it out, but they were in the "club" anyway. Boys, twelve and thirteen years old, Minerva, in such a condition that it was almost pitiful. Of course there were older people there, decent and respectful, but the "kids" seemed to have the most. These around would talk about it but nothing was done to stop it. We left too disgusted to enjoy any more and happy to get back to our baby. Hubby made the remark then, "Lyndon, why do you and mothers and fathers they will make." They may make good and they may not, but don't you think it a big risk.

Now maybe this is too long to print, but I had to get it off my chest anyway. "Whorehouse."

A. It surely is too great a risk for youth to take. I hope your letter will be read by many of the foolish, erring youngsters. You are but a youth yourself, and you have found the most worthless thing in life, have found out what it is all about.

I believe that youth is more inclined to heed youth than elders so I am hoping your letter will cause many of them to give heed.

Dear Desperate Problems.

Dear Minerva: I am another one of your many admirers, but never thought I would write you of my problems. They have gotten so desperate that I don't know what to do.

Oh no, I am not a sweet sixteen that can't go with the bunch, nor am I in love with another woman's man. In fact I guess I must be too much in love with my own husband. We have been married six years, have three dear babies. Ours was a runaway marriage. My mother approved, but my stepfather forbade my going out with him any more so we ran off and were married.

We are farmers, live on a quarter section which was left to me by my father when he died. He hasn't been able to make a living since we were married. We lived one year in town. I took in washing to get money to buy the first baby. The clothes. The second year we moved to the farm, then that fall we separated. I went home to my mother, but he coaxed me to come back. After I came back he threatened to kill me and I don't know what all, so I left again, but he came and promised me so many lies that I came back again for the sake of the baby. I hadn't been back but a couple of months when he flew in a rage and beat me on the head until I nearly lost my mind. I threatened I would go again, but he coaxed so hard that I stayed.

Well, he was pretty decent for most of the time until last summer he got mad again and beat me with his fist in the eye until it was black and swollen shut for a week. But he was so sorry that I lied about and said I hurt it. It just seems that

yet no scrubbing
—no boiling

THIS week hang out a whiter and a brighter wash than you've ever had the hard work of washing, as well.

Use Rinso—the granulated laundry soap. Even in hard water it whips at once into thick, creamy, lasting suds. And in these soapy Rinso suds, dirt and stains are loosened so they float off in the rinsing.

No hard rubbing. You don't need a washboard. No boiling to heat the kitchen and waste fuel. Now you just soak and rinse for a whiter wash.

Clothes last longer this gentle way. And hands don't get that washy look. Try Rinso next washday and see it's so economical, because it's all you need—no chipped or bar soaps.

The makers of 30 leading washing machines say it's best in washers, too.

Rinso

he can fly into the most awful rages over nothing. I don't dare say anything to him or I know he would kill me.

I suppose you think I am one of the kind that want to be babied. No, I help with the chores and do the separating besides all the housework and the children. Baby will be one year next month. There isn't a team caught that I don't help with. In the summer, I take care of one team, harness and harness and hitch up every day. He uses four head in the field. I raise quite a few chickens and try to have a garden. I never knew anything about his parents only that they were dead. He has two sisters and brothers.

I just can't bear to think of giving up the children. He seems to think enough of them. I know he would probably get some of them if we went to court. I hate to break up a home. Mrs. Trouble.

A. It is a great mistake for you to remain with a man who gives vent to a vicious temper through abusing you. Too many tragedies happen every day for a woman to take such risks. You are risking the safety and happiness of the babies as well as your own.

I certainly believe in holding the home together even at a sacrifice, but not at the sacrifice of a woman's pride, self respect and even her safety.

Why wouldn't you get all the children? Certainly, if you could secure a divorce from your husband on the grounds of cruelty, he would not be given any of the children.

If you secured a divorce, it would mean hard work to act as both father and mother to those kiddies. In the beginning you would have to let others care for the babies for the time. But wouldn't that be infinitely better for your husband, depriving abuse from your husband, and better for the children than to permit them to grow up in a home where they would see their father fly into violent uncontrolled rages and abuse their mother and run the risk of some day being the victims themselves of that ungodly temper? I think so.

A "White Tongue."
Rosalie: You should not have a "white tongue." It is an indication that all is not well within.

It is said that among the relics found at Mount Vernon, the home of Washington, is a silver tongue scraper used by the Father of His Country to clean the coating from his tongue each morning.

Many persons are equally resigned to this condition of the coated tongue, but it should be heard. Tonsillitis is said by authorities to be the condition which is responsible for this state, brought on by lowered vitality and overworking of the assimilative and eliminative organs. Start at once to get rid of the poison in your system through some such daily system as this: Eat plenty of cooled and raw greens.

Walk four or five miles daily. Take an internal bath daily for several weeks.

Take setting-up exercises morning and evening.

Eat only one-half the amount of food you have been using.

Avoid meats and an excess of eggs and milk.

Take a daily sweat in gymnasium, through hard work or in electric bath.

Take deep breathing exercise each day while walking.

Avoid late hours, nervous fatigue, undue excitement.

Live sanely and quietly.

Judiciary Body

Has No Clerk Yet

An erroneous item published in The Star was that Dean R. Sackett, son of Republican State Chairman H. E. Sackett of Beatrice, had been appointed as clerk of the Judiciary committee for the house of representatives. The mistake was due to a misunderstanding over the telephone. Mr. Sackett has been named as clerk of the claims and deficiencies committee.

Another error two or three days ago credited Mr. White (Garfield) with having offered an amendment in the house to the resolution providing for a special joint committee to confer the settlement of railroad tax suits. The amendment was proposed by another man and was voted down. Mr. White made the motion to adopt the resolution, which was carried. In this instance also, the facts were incorrectly transcribed.

EMPRESS CARLOTTA

Empress Carlotta, 55-year old widow of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico died at her chateau near Brussels Wednesday morning after a brief illness following an attack of influenza.

For sixty years, since the death of her husband, the ill-fated emperor, she had lived in seclusion, her mind blank, her heart broken by the tragic termination of a grand dream to establish a Hapsburg monarchy in this western hemisphere. It has been tritely said that the world loves a lover and so the world has revealed more than customary interest in the death of this old woman, whose life has been so eloquently the symbol of another day and another age. The story which carried the news of her last hours and her demise was a breath of the past. It brought the readers up with a jerk to a realization of the vast changes which have taken place in these last fifty years—a world made over in thought and traditions and customs.

The marriage of Carlotta and Maximilian was a love match. Archduke of Austria, and brother of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, whose throne was smashed in for his bride and settled down to live an idyllic life among his happy, care-free countrymen. Civil war had broken out in America. In 1852 and 1853, French troops of Napoleon III occupied the principal parts of Mexico. Maximilian was offered the throne as emperor of Mexico as the next in line of the Hapsburg dynasty. He was loath to accept but finally yielded to the entreaties of his young bride on the condition his choice be ratified by a popular vote in Mexico, which was easily secured under the loose system of elections there. He landed in Vera Cruz in 1863, without any knowledge of the people over whom he was to rule or the problems he was called upon to face. His brief reign was marked by one mistake after another, finally culminating when the United States, freed from the embarrassment of the Civil War, succeeded in convincing the French ruler that it would not tolerate European intervention in Mexican affairs. The French troops were withdrawn from the support of Maximilian but only after the beautiful Carlotta had made her trip across the ocean to intercede personally with Napoleon III and to plead with him to reconsider the order of withdrawal. She was brutally ordered to leave the country and journeyed to Spain, where encouragement was given her.

But in 1867 Maximilian's forces in Mexico were surrounded by republican troops. On May 14, plans were made for a sortie to enable the emperor to escape to the coast, and thence to Austria. He was betrayed by one who had been a constant favorite of the emperor and empress, captured, tried by military court on charges of treason, usurpation of public power, condemned to be shot and the sentence carried out on June 19, 1867. Ultimately his body was surrendered to Austria and now reposes in the imperial vault. When word of his execution reached Europe, Carlotta lost her reason.

Except for brief intervals of lucidity, she was the mad woman of European royalty these last sixty years. The great transformation which swept Europe was concealed from her. She did not know her nephew had ascended the throne of Belgium. She never learned that thrones came toppling down at the close of the greatest struggle Europe has ever seen; that republics and democracies sprang up overnight; that in some instances democratic governments gave way to dictatorships.

For Carlotta the old, gilded world of dashing knights, of gay courts, of obedient and servile countryfolk still existed. She was living in an age which has passed, upon which the dust of years has settled, forgotten completely by a busy world, while the peoples surged forward to new conceptions of human freedom and liberty. We know that system which Carlotta represented had crushed the hopes and ambitions which stirred in the breasts of so many millions of men and women that no tears could be shed over its downfall and yet the world can and does deeply sympathize with the tragic life story of this bright-eyed charming girl, who ceased living when she was in her early twenties but still remained on earth in flesh and blood, her mind filled with the glories of a glamorous past. We honor her today for an immortal love which is the tenderest and purest of human emotions.

NEARER PORT FOR CANADA GRAIN

That the people of Canada are alive to the importance of placing the great wheat fields of their prairie provinces as close to water transportation as possible is evidenced by the fact that a government merchant marine vessel is to be sent into Hudson bay next summer for the purpose of testing out conditions of navigation in Hudson strait, particularly with respect to the length of time it remains open. It is also proposed to make an exhaustive study of weather conditions.

Frederick Palmer, the British engineer, is to go to Port Nelson during the summer and it may be that he will go by water instead of by rail, as his purpose is to study harbor works and the feasibility of properly developing a harbor on the bay. He will investigate both Port Nelson and Churchill, and probably make a report as to which is the more suitable for development as a terminal.

The government has already expended a large sum for terminal facilities at Port Nelson, and the railroad from the wheat fields of the southwest is now within a comparatively short distance of that port. However, it is stated that a great deal of dredging will be required there, which would not be necessary at Churchill. The latter is a considerable distance north of Port Nelson, but it is correspondingly nearer to the strait, through which all vessels making either point must pass. Work on the railroad is to be pushed with all possible speed, it is stated, so that those back of the northern port project are apparently certain that terminals will be developed at either Port Nelson or Churchill, thus reducing to the minimum the distance between the wheat fields and Liverpool.

Should the northern Canadian water route be opened before the Lakes-St. Lawrence or the Missouri-Mississippi route, grain growers in this section will be placed at a further disadvantage, for Canadian wheat growers will be enabled to lay their product down in Liverpool for several cents a bushel less than transportation charges than those of the United States central west.

The people of this section have been diligent against heavy odds, and it is hoped that there will be no unnecessary delay in the attainment of the end for which they fought.

THE PHILADELPHIA BALLOTS

The United States senate now has in its official custody the 2,000 boxes of ballots cast in Philadelphia at the election last November, which are supposed to contain evidence of wholesale frauds committed to insure the election of William S. Vare as senator from that state. The first thing done after taking possession of the boxes was to seal them up as a safeguard against any molestation or tampering with the contents.

This is a very proper precaution, but it does not guarantee that when the investigating committee of the senate gets around to opening up the boxes and looking over the ballots it will find the same ones which were actually voted in Philadelphia on election day. It must not be forgotten that up to this time they have been in the hands of the city machine, which has the reputation of making election returns show whatever the machine wants. During the period of over two months intervening since election, there has no doubt been ample opportunity to remove from the boxes much of the damaging evidence they may have contained. The bogus ballots with which they are supposed to have been stuffed on election day may have been taken out and others, more carefully marked to look like the real thing, substituted. On the other hand, where votes honestly marked and cast were not counted, the same chance existed to get rid of the real ballots and put phoney ones in their place.

Regardless of what an inspection of the ballots themselves may disclose, the question as to whether or not there was an honest election in Philadelphia remains. Such an organization as the Vare machine has other ways of making its will effective than merely by padding the tally sheets in voting places. Without doubt, hundreds and thousands of people in the Quaker city failed to go to the polls and register their choice for United States senator, either because they feared to antagonize the dominant regime or because they believed their votes against its candidate would not be counted and, therefore, it would not be worth while to go through the form of marking ballots.

What the actual sentiment of a majority of the people of Philadelphia was cannot be determined by scrutinizing the ballot boxes and their contents now. This election there was nothing but a farce, with the Vare forces in complete control. To a less extent, the same condition prevailed in Pittsburgh. It was necessary in those two strongholds of gang politics to return 75,000 majority for Vare, in order to overcome the adverse vote of the rest of Pennsylvania. The two local machines did what was expected of them. The senate committee could find plenty of justification for throwing out the entire vote of both cities, and especially that of Philadelphia. There is sufficient evidence of wholesale fraud on the face of the returns, without going any further, to support such action. However, the investigating body will no doubt prefer to follow a conservative course by examining the ballots themselves.

By turning down Vare and seating his opponent, William B. Wilson, as the legally elected senator, the upper branch of congress would do more to advance the cause of honest elections in the United States than any other one thing could accomplish.

MORE HONORS FOR NEBRASKA

Additional honors have come to the Agricultural College of the University of Nebraska in the triumph of the junior live stock judging team in winning first place in the team competition at the National Western Live stock show, at Denver.

It was the third first captured by the Nebraskans in the event which is held annually, and gave the Cornhuskers undisputed permanent possession of the trophy cup. That is of course very gratifying to the citizens of this state and reveals the excellent work which is being done in preparing young men to carry on the agricultural activities which provide Nebraska with its greatest industry.

The cup and the honor which it represents is not the most significant phase of these repeated triumphs of the Nebraska boys in competition with the finest scholarship of other great educational institutions, however. It means a better and a more intelligent agriculture for Nebraska. These young men, who are members of the team which carried the colors of the state university, will become citizens of the state. They are going back to the farm to carry on the work for which they have been preparing themselves. They will have a better foundation for successful farming than their fathers. The influence of well-directed scientific agriculture has already been felt in this state. It will make its presence known to an even larger degree in the years to come.

REPRESSIVE LAWS

Dr. Andrew M. Bruce of Northwestern university has just completed a study of crime in Chicago directed particularly to its causes. What he has to say with reference to it is of great importance to America.

Referring to the absence of crime in European countries in anything like the proportion found in the United States, Dr. Bruce attributes that fact to homogeneity of population, generations of discipline and central administration of police. There is nothing in America, he says, to compare with Scotland Yard with its general administration. Here there are forty-eight police power sovereignties. In America are mixed populations, which contain all of the temperaments and habits of the world. Added to this is a mass of repressive legislation, which is completely outside of European ideas of what laws should be.

Here in this country, which was founded by people to escape the repression and oppression of Europe, we have in this last half century added hundreds of laws to control and regulate the actions and habits of individuals. It is not surprising we have more lawbreakers. There are so infinitely many more laws to break. In forty-four of the forty-eight states of the union two years ago, 17,000 bills were introduced by the lawmakers. More than a thousand new laws were added to the statute books. At the sessions which opened the first of the year, the gates were lifted on a new flood. Fully half of them are repressive in character.

There are too many citizens in the legislature inclined to pass any old law and too many in the jury boxes inclined to enforce none. Nothing but confusion and lawlessness can grow out of a situation of this kind.

A BIT OF HOMEY PHILOSOPHY

Outdoor sports soon will claim the leisure time of many men. Dinners will be delayed, engagements forgotten. In the past have you given the little wife a square deal when it comes to interfering with your enjoyment of sports?

She wants dinner at the time it will best suit her husband and prepares it to be served at that time. It takes planning, perhaps sacrifice on her part to be able to do this.

A dinner, in fact any meal, is not improved by waiting. Do you blame her for being displeased if, after her effort in warm weather, you will not deny yourself the extra few minutes which might mean a successful meal instead of a dried-up excuse for a meal? Perhaps your wife desires to ride with friends after dinner.

If you are late she is upset and does not enjoy it. It is mighty selfish of you to ignore her comfort and plans. The little wife is an equal partner in your firm, isn't she? You would not treat your business partner as you treat your wife, in this matter of letting your outdoor sport rule your course of action all summer.

Some Cold Weather Suggestions

Chapped Lips.
Don't have chapped lips! There is nothing more distressing to see, or uncomfortable to feel, than chapped lips, especially when they go on to the stage of swelling, cracking and bleeding.

These conditions are very easily prevented by the application of a cold cream lipstick. These lipsticks are inexpensive—you can get one for 15 to 25 cents—and they are usually made of a specially prepared cold cream with a little glycerine. When applied, a thin colorless coating is left which will act as a protection against the cold air. Those who are troubled with sensitive lips should wear without one of these lipsticks. They are easily cracked and will not serve because it is too thin, rubs off too easily and is impractical to carry.

Men who are susceptible to chapped lips should not scorn to have a lipstick of this nature with them, constantly; a good coating should be applied before going out, and it out for any length of time, another coating should be applied.

Chirped lips should not be considered lightly because in the later years, when the so-called cancer age begins, a crack or sore on the lip, if allowed to go on indefinitely, may be the basis for a cancerous growth.

Chapped Hands.
There is nothing better for chapped hands than glycerine, but it must be readily diluted to be healing. The reason some find that glycerine does not agree with their skin is that they do not dilute it sufficiently. Three-quarters water and sometimes a greater dilution than this should be used.

A practical way to use glycerine is to buy it undiluted, pour a few drops into the palm of the hand and then add about three or four times as much water and rub it as you rub it on the hands. Those who have their hands in water a good deal should have a bottle of glycerine or some other lotion handy and use it every time the hands are washed.

This glycerine solution, with a drop or two of carbolic acid to the ounce, is a good healing solution for those who are troubled with scaly and itchy skin.

If you and glycerine, even greatly diluted, does not agree, then perhaps liberal applications of cold cream or petrolatum or mutton tallow will work. If the hands are severely chapped, better wear some loose gloves with the glycerine or cream on the hands, at night.

Chilblains.
Chilblains is the result of severe cold on portions of the skin. It is usually found on the toes, but it may occur on the fingers. Those who are predisposed to chilblains and frost bite should wear woolen coverings on the hands, feet and ears, if necessary. Absolute cleanliness with thorough drying after washing, especially of the feet, is very important. Sometimes stimulating ointments, containing camphor, iodine, ichthyol or carbolic acid, are helpful.

Kellogg recommends the alternate hot and cold foot bath as the best remedy for chilblains. The hot water should be as hot as can be borne, and the cold as cold as can be obtained. Dip the feet for 30 seconds into the hot water and then for 15 seconds into the cold. Repeat this treatment twice daily.

Gravity Against Centrifuge

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"The friction that a wood turner applies in polishing a dry stick develops a current (magnetic or electric) that often holds the dust in a circle, slowly revolving around the stick."

So says a reader in Cleveland, Ohio, and asks whether the principle of this curious phenomenon helps to explain "what force besides the centripetal force of gravity opposes the tremendous centrifugal force that must be generated by the earth's revolutions."

There is no need to call in a supposed electric or magnetic force to aid gravity in counterbalancing the centrifugal force of the earth's rotation. Gravity alone is able to do the work. It is easily shown mathematically that the centrifugal force on the equator, where the force is greatest, amounts to only about 1/289th of gravity.

At all places north or south of the equator the centrifugal force diminishes in proportion to the cosine of the latitude. Take for instance latitude 40 degrees, either north or south of the equator. A glance at a trigonometrical table shows that the cosine of 40 degrees is 0.7660. Multiply 1/289th by 0.7660 and we get 1/377th, which is the centrifugal force as compared with gravity in latitude 40 degrees. At the poles, where the cosine becomes zero, the centrifugal force is also zero.

For this reason bodies at the poles weigh a little more than the same bodies at the equator. Weight at the poles is also greater than on the equator in consequence of the fact that the poles are nearer the center of gravity of the globe. Combining the effects of these two causes, viz., absence of centrifugal force and gain of gravity through greater nearness to the center, it is calculated that the weight of any body would gain about 1/190th by being transported from the equator to one of the poles.

A reminder of the wonderful things that anciently occurred in our old globe, leaving traces that excite astonishment when their cause becomes known, is to be found in the fact that during the course of ages the entire earth has yielded to centrifugal force sufficiently to draw in each of its poles about thirteen miles toward the center. While corresponding swelling out around its equatorial regions. If it had not done this, the oceans would be heaped up to an enormous depth in a vast ring of water, leaving the equator for its central line while all the land would be in the form of two circular caps, one around each pole.

But by assuming a figure of equilibrium between gravitation and centrifugal force, the earth has rendered it possible for bodies of water to exist anywhere on its surface, where other conditions permit or require their presence.

What we call centrifugal force is merely a consequence of motion, viz., the motion of rotation of the earth. It depends strictly upon the velocity of that motion. Its formula is: Force equals the square of the velocity of rotation divided by the radius of the rotating body.

Now, look what a remarkable consequence follows. At the present velocity of rotation the centrifugal force is 1/289th of gravity.

Diabetics

If you have the slightest symptoms of Diabetes, such as excessive thirst, increased hunger, with loss of weight in spite of keen appetite, with nervousness, irritability, restlessness, anxiety over trifles and loss of strength—lose no time in seeking one of the most remarkable books of the day "Diabetes Cured." It will be mailed free to anyone who will send merely name and address to Sanborn Laboratories, Y. M. C. A. Building, Battle Creek, Michigan. It describes the Sanborn home treatment and relates the experiences of men and women of all ages, prominent who restored themselves to perfect health after other treatments had failed.

The book has 76 pages bound in board covers and is a mine of authentic information for those who are suffering from Diabetes.

Correct this sentence: "He tells a joke well, and the audience doesn't repeat the point two or three times."

Suppose some power should increase the velocity; then centrifugal force would grow as the square of the increase of velocity, and when their velocity became 17 times greater than it now is, centrifugal force would be increased the square of 17, or 289 times, thus equalling gravity at the equator.

Along the equator bodies would completely lose their weight, though bodies at the poles would lose nothing, while those distributed at various distances north or south of the equator would lose, as before said, in proportion to the cosine of the latitude.

Any additional increase of rotation would hurl bodies from the equator like drops of water from a grindstone, and if the speed rose higher and higher the surface of the earth would be stripped off at greater and greater distances north and south, until we may imagine our new sea coral planet almost obliterated by this strange attrition process to a mere backbone represented by an immeasurably exiguous line of spinning atoms, lying along the center of what was once the earth, and capped at each end by a madly whirling mathematical point, formerly called a Pole.

Here and There

A Circus Man's Palace.
(The New Yorker.)

In his own right the late Charles Ringling was one of America's twenty-five richest men. Tall, with a very red face, a gold watch chain across his prosperous stomach, he was seen from time to time on Fifth avenue.

His friends speak of him as a kindly man, vain, charitable, shrewd in business, passionately fond of the circus. His atmosphere was all about him. He carried it into his apartment, setting off the carefully planned Louis Quatorze furniture with circus posters, Yale banners and gaudy paintings of bareback riders and trapeze artists.

Charles Ringling's real pride, however, has been in his winter home, built a year or two ago at Sarasota, Fla. He and his brother, John, owned it million acres of land on the west coast of Florida, and into the raising of celery and asparagus he put almost as much energy as he put into the circus.

The house was of Moorish design, with walls of golden brown containing mosaic paintings of brilliant blues and reds. A railroad siding was laid to it so that the owner might ride to his door in his private car—a phenomenon among private cars whose interior was of silk and white enamel. From the grounds was built a pier to which the Ringlings' yachts, Zepherus and Zelophus, Jr., might attach themselves. A lover overlooking much of the Ringling domain was seated.

The interior of the house was Italian, its halls cluttered with art treasures wedged in between cloisonne jars, which were kept in meticulous order by Arab servants with flowing mustaches and turbans.

Charles' supreme effort went into the design of his own bedroom. It was oval in shape, with walls of green marble and a strip of light parquet flooring providing a border for an oval carpet of dark blue. In the center of this stood the bed. It was a huge one, with no footboards and was covered by a spread of old Italian embroidery. The ceiling of the room was painted to represent sky and clouds and the lighting of this was controlled by an elaborate electrical installation.

A variety of effects could be obtained by pressing various buttons on a switchboard attached to the bed. It was Mr. Ringling's belief that certain color effects induced certain moods.

Another interesting feature was the table. This article of furniture was in reality the terminus of a dumb waiter shaft which ascended from the nether regions. Mr. Ringling had but to touch a button and his breakfast appeared upon his table.

The Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By Will Rogers

I reckon the reason why kids like pie is that they haven't had much experience with pie. Nearly every kid likes pie, and it ain't often any more that you see grownups that like pie. It was different a long time ago, when pies were made by women. Then a girl could eat apple pie after he was twenty, and it would only make him happy.

A kid by the name of Billy was visiting and the hostess hadn't asked him to come or anything, but she gave him a piece of pie, but because she knew that was what he wanted, Billy swallowed it and began looking at the rest of the pie as though he had some plan in mind.

"Does your mother let you eat two pieces of pie at home, Billy?" the lady asked.

"Nope, she don't. But that don't make no difference. She'd be glad for me to eat two pieces at your house, because this ain't her pie." (Copyright, 1927, The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Illinois Central THE ROAD OF TRAVEL LUXURY

COW TESTING CHANGE LOSS

House Refuses to Allow Neighbors to Decide On Fitness For Use.

Bill Aimed at Maggi Justice Court Causes Discussion.

By a onesided vote Thursday forenoon, the lower branch of the Nebraska lawmaking diet put the kibosh on Representative Williams' bill intended to let farmers test their own or their neighbors' cattle for tuberculosis, instead of calling in a regular veterinarian and paying his charges.

The bill, introduced in short order, Mr. Williams said he had heard that veterinarians are overcharging the farmers for their services. Mr. Jones, farmer member from Colfax, replied that under the law as it now stands any cattle owner may call on the state veterinarian to do the testing, at an expense not greater than 15 cents per head.

The measure was intended to prevent E. C. Maggi, justice of the peace in territory south of Lincoln, from issuing summons to city residents and entering default judgments against them for not having their cattle tested.

Mr. Maggi, after a motion by Mr. Regan, to postpone it indefinitely had been beaten.

Regan charged that the bill had been introduced "at every session of the legislature, for 15 years" and was aimed at "one particular man" who had been a "bad influence."

Denial was made by Mr. Maggi that he had any personal animosity toward Maggi, but he said the system is wrong and should be done.

Mr. Maggi told about persons who had been served with summons from Maggi's court and had made the trip out to the store on South Fourteenth street, near the postoffice where it is located, only to find nobody there; and had learned afterward the judgments were entered in default against them by the justice at his government office in the piece building.

Balks on Destroying Records.

A bill permitting the Lancaster and Douglas counties boards and county officials to destroy useless records more than 25 years old, under the direction of a district court judge, failed to satisfy the house. Some members wanted its scope widened to cover all counties, and others wanted the plan for destroying something of great historic value might thus be destroyed. It was finally sent back to the standing committee for further consideration.

The R. 22, the Staats bill allowing county boards to spend $500 in any biennial period ($800 in counties of over 25,000 population) to erect historical monuments and markers, was advanced to third reading. One section drew opposition. This was a proviso giving county boards the power of eminent domain in acquiring sites for such markers.

SUPPORTERS OF APPOINTEE ARE HOPEFUL

Feed of Missouri, to deny Smith the oath of office, pending an elections committee investigation of his pre-primary campaign.

Although suffering from an absence in the ear, Smith again went to the senate chamber today and took the same chair he occupied during five and a half hours of debate yesterday. The galleries were not so crowded as at yesterday's session, but there was a steady attendance of spectators on the floor.

Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, re-opened the discussion, declaring the senate was confronted with the question whether it could add or take from the senatorial qualifications set forth in the constitution.

Watson Makes Plea.

"Are there other qualifications?" he asked, "if so where are they? There are no other qualifications."

He then asked the senate whether a man came here with credentials who had been impeached, or had a contagious disease, or had committed a crime on his way to the senate, the senate would have to admit him," he asked Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader.

"That's my view," said Watson. "If a state sent a letter here, the senate would have to read it."

"That's my view," said Watson. "If a state sent a letter here, the senate would have to read it."

Then if a state sent a lunatic here, the senate contends that the senate would have to read it?"

"Oh, everybody knows a lunatic cannot take the oath," Watson returned.

Bingham Interrupts.

Senator Bingham, republican, Connecticut broke in to quote Senator Bayard of Delaware, in 1862, that the senate could not admit an idiot if his credentials were in proper form.

Does the senator subscribe to that?" asked Senator Robinson.

"I do," Bingham replied.

Expressing his own disagreement the democratic leader added:

"We all know that fools, sometimes damn fools, get into legislative bodies."

Resuming his speech Senator Watson reviewed a long list of precedents stretching back more than a century.

The democratic floor leader told the senate that republicans were motivated solely by political expediency in their effort to seat Smith.

"The statements by Senator Watson," Senator Robinson said, amounted to a "confession" that he

Canton Has New Slaying Mystery

CANTON, O., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Canton authorities today faced another "murder" mystery. The nude body of an unidentified man was found in the gutter, showing evidence of having been strangled, was found in a sewer yesterday.

After the murder an attempt had been made to burn the body, according to Coroner T. C. McQuate. The man had been dead about two weeks. The coat bore a tailor's mark: "Goldie's Clothing, 784, Fifth Avenue, New York."

The coat and a pair of trousers were found near the body.

held party, considerations to be above constitutional questions, in dealing with the Smith case. Watson denied he had so expressed himself, but Robinson repeated the charge.

Harrison Questions.

Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, asked Senator Watson to tell the senate about the effort made by republican leaders to keep Smith from coming to Washington at all.

"When I get through here and the senator and I get out in the lobby, I'll tell the senator all about that," Senator Watson said.

"Object," shouted Senator Robinson, amid a roar of laughter.

Watson asked the question and the Indian said he did call Smith on the telephone and tell him not to present his credentials here.

"And now I refuse to answer further questions on that private matter," he said.

Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, was on his feet, but sat down as Watson made his declaration.

"Does the senator want to ask a question?" Watson asked.

Turned to Borah. If the Idahoan answered, it was drowned out by the roar from the galleries.

Concluding Senator Watson declared that it was the plain duty of the senate under the constitution to seat Smith.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(I. N. S.)—Poised upon the doorstep of the senate but unable to find the path, Senator Frank L. Smith of Illinois, today patiently awaited a decision on his demand to take the oath as an United States senator.

Although Smith appeared certain of disapproval, administrative forces were wielding a tremendous influence to gain him temporary admission to the senate. As the debate entered its second day, a check of an earlier international committee relations that Smith accepted $20,000 in gifts from public utilities of Illinois for his primary campaign while serving as chairman of the state's utilities commission, that his personal expenditures were $287,000, far more than Newberry's—and that in all $15,000 was spent in his behalf.

With this record in the primary, the coalition maintained that Smith was not entitled to ever become a member of the senate.

His Backers Active.

The administration threw its support to Smith and its spokesmen contended that he was entitled to his oath of office, even if his alleged primary misdeeds justified his expulsion later. The republican leaders argued that the senate had no right to reject the credentials given by Gov. Len Small but rather was compelled to accept them on their face.

The debate meanwhile developed considerable bitterness. The senators particularly were angered by the attitude of regular republicans, pointing out that the senators who are now defending Smith were the first to demand that one of their group—Senator Kyle of North Dakota—should be denied the oath a year ago.

Both factions expressed a willingness to decide the issue by a vote before adjournment tonight. Unless there are last minute changes, it was apparent Smith would be denied the oath. The first day's debate, however, showed that Senators Borah, republican of Idaho, King, democrat of Utah, and Steele, democrat of Iowa, who were reported opposed to Smith, had been won over to the plan to give him the oath. While this reduced the majority against Smith, it still left him a half dozen votes short of a seat in the senate.

of the board of control to conduct an investigation and make the decision. Furthermore one member of the board of control and one disinterested person must witness the operation.

Although the provisions of the bill include the reformatories for both men and women as well as the industrial schools and homes, Senator Reed says that he is only seeking to enforce its provisions on those who have long criminal records or who have shown inborn criminal inclinations. Many of the inmates of these institutions are serving sentences for a first offense, but others are found to have had other criminal records after they have been more carefully investigated.

A question has arisen, as to whether the bill provides specifically for the sterilization of inmates who are discharged from the penal institutions upon the expiration of their sentences. The wording of the bill is "for parole or discharge."

A bill introduced by Senator Chamberlain would provide for the sterilization of inmates of the state penitentiary at the expiration of their sentences. The bill would also provide in his bill, S. P. 38, for the defense of law enforcement officers by the state, county or city of village in civil actions against the officers which arise out of the performance of their duties.

ARIZONA UNL. HEAD RESIGNS

President Marvin And Four Regents Are To Step Down.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 20.—(By the Associated Press).—President Cloyd H. Marvin of the University of Arizona, and four members of the university board of regents tendered their resignations to Gov. George W. P. Hunt Wednesday.

In explanation of his resignation, E. E. Ellingwood, chancellor of the board, said "the discord and dissension among some of the members of the board is real and irreconcilable."

President Marvin issued a statement declaring that "recent charges in the personnel" of the board "obviously establishes a board which undoubtedly will be unsympathetic to the plans of the administration."

Marvin assumed the presidency of the university in September, 1922, going to Tucson, site of the university, from the southern branch of the University of California.

He flared up in the relations between the president and faculty occurred last summer when the Tucson Ministerial association, backed by a group of dissident members of the faculty, brought charges against Dr. Marvin, that he had disrupted the morale of the faculty and student body. He was exonerated of the charges by the board of regents following a series of hearings.

Meanwhile offers of aid continue to pour in from outside sources. The citizens of Merced, Cal., offered to send fifty hundred dollars to the embattled area and A. J. Small of Canon City, Colo., who has had considerable success as municipal catcher, also volunteered his services.

run loose, and settle into the feeling of freedom, he would get into certain ways of acting and you could have confidence in what to expect of his habits.

"Jazz," he repeated the word, in answer to a question.

"Jazz is music with the tune taken out."

Likes "Tune" to Music.

"I like some tune to music to which I dance, but when they commercialized dancing and jazz they took all the tune out of it."

Mr. and Mrs. Ford in the old ballroom of the old "Red House Tavern," immortalized by the poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. They were seated in the room where the service men indicated Smith to the strains of an orchestra of four players, all workmen in the Ford factories, which they had brought with them from Detroit.

I asked if he looked for the revival of old fashioned dancing to make people take more of their recreation in their own homes.

"No," said Mr. Ford, frankly. "You can't expect the young people to do much with music or dancing in the homes. Records for the victrola have helped and the radio; but recreation is really more of a community affair. Get a crowd together and influence more fun."

Mr. and Mrs. Ford had come from Michigan to Sudbury this week especially to be present at the opening of the very little red school house to which Mary and her little family had been sent.

The families in the neighborhood are studying there.

"We have sixteen hundred children in our school at Dearborn," went on Mr. Ford, "and they all get instruction in practical arts and manual training."

Does Not Advocate Tests.

"No, I do not advocate tests to pick out what job a child shall be trained for. Let them study and try things and they will soon sort themselves out to the jobs they like and can do well. We get the number for executives in our personnel by that natural process. A man soon shows what work he likes, is promoted, makes good."

"We give the children plenty of chance to see the way things are done in the olden times, and to show them the fundamental processes. They can think out improvements. You have to let people think things out for themselves."

"We have the old mill on this property, now restored and running, so that the children can follow the production of bread, for instance, from the growing of the grain on the farm through the grinding and milling, and so forth."

"As a matter of fact, we have five village industry plants here for instance, has to do with the weaving of cloth. The children who graduate from school will have the opportunity of going into whatever industry interests them and they can choose because they will have had practical experience of the various sorts, to judge by."

LABOR AND SOCIAL

UNEMPLOYMENT HERE

Committees representing the labor unions and the social welfare agencies of the community met Thursday forenoon at the Y. M. C. A. to discuss the unemployment situation in Lincoln. Several different versions were put forth and a committee was authorized to make a study of the situation and at the same time determine who is a resident. Up on this will hinge any action that might be taken. It was stated that the committee before adjournment the joint conference will meet again Friday at the Y. M. C. A.

jobs has been to bury the rodents killed by the tons of thousands with the poisoned grain.

Each morning the first job is to clear the houses and buildings of dead mice, and then the yard and surrounding areas and the task is a tremendous one, he said.

"Enemy" Being Held.

TART, Cal., Jan. 20.—(I. N. S.)—"We are holding the enemy on all fronts."

That was the message today from the sector where a million or more mice are surging toward Bakersfield in quest of food.

The strange migration began about a week ago when high water drove the mice from Buena Vista lake, poisoning the pests have been destroyed since they began their overland trek, but the reserves seem to be endless.

The mice, it is estimated, have already infested an area of twelve by eight miles, eating grain and other green stuffs as they traveled.

Ten miles of trenches have been dug to stop further advance of the rodents and authorities expect to have the invaders completely exterminated within ten days.

ROBBER VICTIM DIES OF WOUND

Charge Of Murder To Be Filed In Omaha Against Alleged Bandit.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 20.—(AP)—John McCree, porter of the Strand theatre, who was shot twice by a bandit, who held up the porter and Miss Helen Linberry, cashier, and escaped with $1,595 last Monday noon, died in a hospital here last night.

Charges of murder will be filed against George O'Neil alias George Nolan, held as a suspect in connection with the holdup, officers said, following McCree's death. John W. Yeager, chief deputy county attorney, said an information charging O'Neil with highway robbery had already been drawn up.

O'Neil and his wife were arrested at a hotel here shortly after the robbery, after police had found a clip of matches bearing the hotel's name in an automobile said to have been used in the robbery. Mrs. Gladys Hodgins, who witnessed the robbery from a nearby beauty shop, said she was positive in her identification of O'Neil as the bandit.

McCree was taken to McCree's bedside Wednesday morning, and the porter later said he looked like the man who shot him.

STATE DEFENDS
OUSTING OF KLAN
FROM KANSAS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Ousting of the Ku Klux Klan from Kansas was defended by the state in a brief filed in the Supreme court in proceedings brought by the Klan alleging that Kansas had violated the constitutional rights of the organization.

Failing to make application under the Kansas laws for authority to engage in business in the state, the Klan, as a Georgia corporation, was excluded through proceedings in the courts. The Klan appealed to the Supreme court and its case will soon be reached for oral argument.

DEATHS.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Marling Graves will be held at 2:30 p. m. at the funeral home of Goldstein and Umberger's chapel Sunday at 1:30 in charge of Rev. J. J. Sheaff assisted by Rev. J. W. Custer. Burial will be at Fifth.

"I feel as if I were fighting a machine gun with a pitch fork," he said.

The crime commission financing might be handled, he observed, by organizations started in every county by the county attorneys themselves, now that election has passed. It might take six or eight years before a program and an organization could be set up.

They would discuss the matter before the legislature, but that result would be achieved eventually.

Criminals have their state-wide organizations and put up money to spread their propaganda before the courts and the people, said R. J. Howard, so why should not the people be equally protected?

The meeting this morning was planned simply as a symposium on the crime commission, with Judge Stevens presiding. This noon, the county attorneys and the sheriffs, who also are meeting at the Lincoln hotel, were guests for luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce.

A symposium on criminal law and procedure is to be held this afternoon with Harold F. Mattson, presiding. Attorney General O. S. Spillman, County Attorney W. H. Line of Loup City, County Attorney C. E. Schellhorn of Albion, and County Attorney Max Torgio of Lincoln were to speak. This was to be followed by a resolution committee report and election of officers.

Rickard Says Nix to Soft Money for ex-Champ

'Tex' Spikes Tale Dempsey Not to Fight in Tourney

Gotham Promoter Serves Notice ex-Champion Must Throw In With Other Contenders and Prove His Right to Whirl at Title; Jack Due in New York at Early Date.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(I. N. S.)—Jack Dempsey either must fight the ultimate survivor of the Delaney-Sharkey-Maloney heavyweight series or forfeit his immediate chance for a return whatever it was with Gene Tunney for the championship.

This, in effect, was Tex Rickard's reply today to stories in circulation that another Dempsey-Tunney meeting already was in the bag and that the present heavyweight tourney, being a lot of applejack, Rickard was to so connive that Dempsey would get the "shot" and the others would get the air, which generally can be found outside. The reply also might be designated as a commentary on Dempsey's recent allegation that he "wasn't interested" in Rickard's tournament.

It was, incidentally, the promoter's first attempt at rattling the sword as far as Dempsey is concerned, although Rickard wished to disclaim that such was his intention.

Jack On Scene Soon.

"Dempsey will be here in about three weeks," he said. "I don't think we will have any trouble about what should be done next summer. However, anybody who says I am trying to force Dempsey into another Tunney match, without giving the other contenders a chance, is merely trying to make trouble for me."

"I will not put Dempsey in with Tunney again unless he is the best man for the spot. By that time, I will have developed a real challenger as a result of my tournament and I'd be crazy if I didn't make the most of such a man. I'll send him in with Dempsey. Jack will go or with Tunney himself. In either case we will have a real title fight between two real fighters."

Dempsey Talking Tunney.

The suspicion is general that Jack is concerned only with one more fight, if that many. He left that impression with me before departing for the west some months ago.

"I'll fight my way back into condition with a lot of exhibitions," he said on that occasion. "You get all the work you need that way."

Plans New Fight-Arena.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(P.)—The wooden stands on Boyle's thirty acres in New Jersey are to be demolished and the site probably will rise a huge concrete and steel bowl costing $1,400,000 and capable of seating 100,000 persons. Tex Rickard said today.

The new arena will be constructed, the promoter said, if the New Jersey boxing laws are amended to permit decisions and a top seat price of $50. Instead of the $25 limit now in force. He indicated his belief that these changes would be made in the state law. On Boyle's thirty acres a pine structure was erected by Rickard in 1921, at a cost of $345,000, for the bout between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier.

LATZO MATCHED TO FIGHT SAM BAKER

WILKESBARE, Pa., Jan. 20.—(P.)—Pete Latzo, world's welterweight champion, will defend his title against Sergeant Sammy Baker here in May, it was announced today by Morgan Bird, matchmaker of the Armory A. C. Baker lost to Latzo here last week, although he made a good showing.

Latzo has a busy schedule ahead. He meets Jimmy Jones at Pittsburgh, tonight; Al Webster at Cincinnati Feb. 7, and George Russell at Oklahoma City Feb. 17.

KANSAS KNOCKED OFF BY HUSKERS

Jayhawkers Set Back On Heels By Nebraska; Score, 27-24.

LAWRENCE, Neb., Jan. 20.—Coach Charles Black's Nebraska Cornhusker basketball team set Kansas off on a losing streak today in a thrilling victory over the Jayhawkers. It was the first time since 1919 that the Cornhuskers have trimmed the Jayhawkers on the basketball court.

Nebraska forced the battle all the way, leading 17-16 at the end of the first half and at one time during the second half holding a 23 to 16 margin.

The work of Ted Page, lanky center, featured in the Nebraska victory. Page tipped in four baskets and scored three times from the foul line. In addition, he controlled every tip-off and wrecked the Jayhawk scoring plans.

Coach Black's cagers worked like a well-oiled machine and had an excellent eye for the basket, scoring seven of nine opportunities from the foul line. The score:

Victory of Nebraska over the Kansas basketball five, probably will swell the attendance at the college meet Saturday evening, when Coach Charles Black's Cornhuskers meet the Drake Bulldogs in the second home game of the season. The Des Moines collegians have a record of 11 wins and 10 losses and are slated to face the Nebraska tossers a warm argument.

Stellar Bill in Chicago.
CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—(I. N. S.)—The all-star, double-win boxing show offered by Promoter Jim Mullen at the Chicago tonight, is attracting wide attention throughout this section. Possibility that a featherweight champion may be manufactured during the matchup between Jim Mullen and Silas Spinks has peaked interest in the attraction.

Mullen announced he will ask the Illinois boxing commission to declare the winner of 1927. He is sticking by his guns, however, in the assertion that his league has enough "on" Cobb and Speaker as managers to keep them out of that ring until the real test of 1927. It was for an explanation of a statement on the Cobb-Speaker case by Johnson that Commissioner Landis called the Cobb-Speaker case home last night for Cleveland without vouching any reason for the trip. ## The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to cure it, and you have had cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the secret, heals the membrane, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable, guaiacol, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GRAIN MARKETS

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 20.—Livestock: Commission house buying ascribed to the northwest, especially Winnipeg, rallied today from an early setback. Export business in North America was also more liberal. Volume, however, was not as large as last week. A quantity of durum wheat, however, from the U. S. was reported sold to Europe at a new high price record for the crop.

Wheat closed 1/2¢ higher, at 10 1/2¢. Corn advanced 1/4¢, at 8 1/4¢. Soybeans advanced 1/4¢, at 10 1/4¢. Provisions advanced 1/4¢, at 10 1/4¢. An increase of 7,000,000 bushels was shown by the Argentine government report today, concerning wheat production this season. The new official total is 24,000,000 bushels and the comparison is with the latest previous government estimate. According to the report, the Argentine export surplus amounts to 14,000,000 against 11,000,000 bushels last year.

Broadening of offers of Argentine wheat in Europe today was noted and was emphasized by lower Liverpool quotations. Actual shipments this week from Argentina were 200,000 bushels, compared with 1,500,000 bushels a year ago. It was estimated that 50,000,000 bushels of wheat are now in the Argentine. Corn showed a slight advance, but failed to rally well with wheat. There was an increase in purchases of corn to arrive in the northwest, but against bids was a factor in checking quotations. Weather conditions remained unfavorable for the interior crop movement.

Corn showed more strength than wheat and averaged higher. Provisions were responsive to late firmness of grain.
